FIRE DESTROYS TREASURES

Sitting amid the charred remains of her burned out apartment is Jane Hartman and her brother, William. The fire began at 6 a.m. today at 132 Andrew Drive in Tiburon, while they and Miss Hartman's roommate, Sandra Van Dyke, were asleep. William, a house guest in the apartment, first noticed the blaze and called the Alto Fire Department. Within 10 minutes of their arrival, firemen had the fire under control but not before it had consumed, according to Miss Hartman, more than $10,000 worth of clothing, Oriental furniture, artifacts and art. The valuable property was collected by the women during their travels as airline stewardesses. According to the fire department, the fire began in the kitchen due to a faulty electric stove.

Fire Police Chief, Grand Jury Says

Move Follows Probe Of 'Quota System'

By DAVID DIETZ

The Marin County Grand Jury called last night for the firing of Chief James D. Wright and his two top subordinates in the Sausalito Police Department.

In its recommendation to Sausalito city officials, the jury adopted the report of a panel subcommittee which found evidence of a quota system of arrests in the 26-member department.

In addition to Wright, in his fourth year as chief,the jury proposed the dismissal of Capt. Robert D. Malkin and Lt. William D. Fraass, patrol division chief.

Beyond the quota system, which the jury said was the result of poor administration and communication and insufficient training procedures, a report released by panel foreman Milen C. Dempster noted that "certain other matters" relating to the department had been turned over to Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales for investigation.

When reports of the committee's findings began leaking to the press earlier this week, the Independent-Journal learned of testimony on departmental practices that went beyond the reported quota system.

Witnesses are said to have told the panel committee of brutality by officers, dishonesty in operations and of favors to individuals. Neither Dempster nor Bales would say today whether this was the substance of the district attorney's probe.

The jury, concluding an eight-month investigation reported to have been made at the request of Wright and Mayor Alexander R. Imlay, said it questioned 24 present and former officers and others and spent many hours studying departmental records. The period covered was from January 1968, when Edward S. Kreins was chief, to July 1971.

In its report, the jury concluded "that the lieutenant in charge of the patrol division and the sergeants under him have emphasized quantity of production and statistics, and have set minimum production standards which they expected officers to meet.

"These minimum expectations were primarily in traffic citations and field interrogations. They varied from time to time and shift to shift. Furthermore, the top leadership permitted this practice, and admits that each sergeant had shift production standards."

The jury said the emphasis on production "is hazardous and inevitably helps promote the writing of questionable citations." It also said it "objects to the improper use of statistics as being inherently coercive and subconsciously motivating

REACTION TO REPORT

'No Comment' To Rage

Reaction to the news that the Marin County Grand Jury recommended firing Sausalito's three top police officers ranged from tight lipped "no comment" to rage among city officials.

Mayor Alexander R. Imlay angrily charged the grand jury destroyed its credibility by recommending the firing of Chief James D. Wright, Capt. Robert D. Malkin and Lt. William D. Fraass.

"I think it is incredible and irresponsible coming from anybody who knows as little as the grand jury says it does about police administration," he said.

But he added he couldn't comment on the report itself because he hasn't seen it yet. He said Milen C. Dempster, foreman of the grand jury, called him last night to tell him of the recommendation and said the report had been changed.

The previous report leaked to newspapers merely noted a lack of leadership.

JAMES D. WRIGHT
Chief under fire

Other officials were more guarded than Imlay, but Gerald Hawes, a former grand juror who termed the original report a hitewash, and William M. Bennett, whose drunken driving arrest in Sausalito sparked the investigation, were pleased.

Hawes said, "This does a great deal to restore my faith in the grand jury process and the findings of this particular grand jury."

He added, "I think the evidence of malfeasance in the Sausalito Police Department was there all the time if the Sausalito council had bothered to look for it. I hope the Sausalito administration will take the report seriously and follow through with it."

Bennett, a member of the state Board of Equalization, complimented the grand jury and said, "I certainly hope the district attorney's office will investigate and prosecute any crimes that were revealed in evidence presented to the grand jury."

City Mgr. Albert R. St. Cyr said, "We have not seen the report so I cannot comment at this time." He said the city has made no independent investigation, but might do so depending on the contents of the grand jury report.

City Councilman Stephen A. Fraser was terser. "I haven't read the report. I have absolutely no comment," he said. Asked if the recommendation surprised him, he said, "I suppose so."

Councilman Earl F. Dunphy also refused to comment and Councilmen Robin Sweeny and Wyman Hicks could not be reached.

Wright, who also could not be reached this morning, has been chief since Jan. 15, 1969. He joined the force in 1966 and worked his way up to captain before succeeding Edward S. Kreins.

Attorneys Brawl Verbally In Emotional Orr Hearing

By LARRY MOWELL

In a session that at times seemed part of a television drama, Fairfax City Councilman Robert R. Souza stuck by previous testimony against fired Police Chief James R. Orr yesterday.

The testimony itself was overshadowed by the verbal brawl between the two attorneys and the collapse of two teen-agers during the 32nd session of the Fairfax Board of Review's hearing into the sufficiency of the charges against Orr.

Fighting admission of a letter clearing Orr of wrong in the Fairfax Pavilion fray of May 30, 1969, City Atty. Wallace S. Myers accused the office of Marin Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales of hindering his efforts to gain evidence.

"I would expect nothing but a whitewash from Mr. Bruce B. Bales in this case," Myers fumed. He refused to retract the statement even after Orr's attorney Leonard Shaw warned him it was a serious charge to make in his excited state.

Shaw is a former assistant of Bales.

Shortly before Myers' dramatic charge, Aline Beban, former chairman of the Fairfax Youth Commission, collapsed apparently from hyperventilation, during a recess and was helped home by police.

Later testimony was interrupted when a friend of Miss Beban identified as Ed McGee tumbled in the rear of the Fairfax Women's Club and injured a knee slightly.

24 Of 26 On Force Back Chief

The Sausalito Police Association, consisting of 24 of the department's 26 officers today expressed its "firm and unstinting" support of Chief James D. Wright.

The backing, coupled with an attack on critics of the department, came in the wake of a call by the Marin County Grand Jury that Wright be dismissed for not interfering with a quota system of arrests.

"We are emphatically of the opinion," an association statement said, "that Chief James D. Wright is a dedicated and competent administrator, honestly administrating the department with the highest of professional and ethical standards.

"It is in this frame of reference that the personnel of the department carry out their duties and it is with this salient point in mind that we voted our unanimous support of the chief and his policies."

The association also lashed out at "inflammatory" and "biased" news coverage of grand jury testimony by the Independent-Journal; at attorney William M. Bennett, "whose charges are so outrageous as to stretch the credibility of any intelligent person,"

100,000 Stage March In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—More than 100,000 angry Protestants marched on Stormont Castle today to protest dissolution of the Northern Ireland Parliament whose final session marked the end of 50 years of Protestant rule and the beginning of rule by London.

Through sheets of rain they converged on the magnificent building by foot, by car, by bus, by bicycle. Families joined the march. British Union Jacks and Ulster flags draped babies in arms and in prams. Many babies clutched red and white Ulster flags in their hands.

Many of the marchers—marching past British soldiers in defiance of a British ban on marching—were some of the 300,000 workers whose two-day-old strike has paralyzed Northern Ireland in a symbol of the defiance Britain may face in the London rule it has imposed for at least a year.

At one point a chauffeur spun a maroon Jaguar sedan from the tree-shaded drive and braked at Stormont. Out stepped William Craig and the crowd of 100,000 exploded in a deafening cheer for the man who has said he will make Ulster ungovernable for the British. He has said also that British rule could bring civil war.

Craig is the rightwing former Home Affairs Minister whose Protestant Ulster Vanguard Movement erased normal life in Ulster for two days and massed today's crowd at the final sitting of Stormont.

"God!" gasped one man in awe at the size of the sea of men, women and children chanting "We want Craig."

"He must be the most power-

66-Year-Old Deed Scuttles Library To Courthouse Square

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

A proposal to relocate the San Rafael Library on Courthouse Square and convert the present library into a recreation center was scuttled today by a 66-year-old deed.

The deed is that by which William Babcock and George Heazelton conveyed the library site on E Street between Fifth and Mission avenues, to the city on March 1, 1906. It gives the property to the city "for the purposes of a public library alone," and provides that failure to comply with the terms shall cause the premises to revert to "the parties of the first part and the survivor of them, their heirs and assigns."

The restriction came to light because City Mgr. James H. McCown suspected such a proviso might be included, as it was customary in conveyances of land for location of Carnegie libraries. City Clerk Marion Grady produced the document from the city files, and McCown found he was right.

The San Rafael Library board recently asked the city council to consider the possibility of relocating the library on Courthouse Square and converting the present structure — which includes that originally financed by Andrew Carnegie — into a recreation center.

The deed discloses that 55 persons, mostly residents of San Rafael, contributed money to buy the library site so that Carnegie would give $25,000 to erect a public library on the premises. In his program of library building, the steel multimillionaire required that a site be donated before he would provide building funds — and apparently also required restrictions so that the resulting building could not be converted to some other use.

Besides restricting the use to a library, the deed contains another interesting provision: " . . . that no stand, or place where intoxicating liquor or beer of any kind whatever is sold, supplied, or given away, shall at any time be allowed or permitted by the said City of San Rafael, or its successors, to be established or to exist on said premises . . . Further, that no liquor, wine, beer or intoxicating drink be allowed or permitted to be sold, exchanged or given away . . . on said premises." Failure to abide by this also will result in the property reverting to the parties of the first part, it provides.

Heading the list of contributors who made up the $6,500 to buy the site were four who gave $500 each: Babcock, Heazelton, Arthur W. Foster and Hotaling Estate Corp.

Marin County Water Co. gave $280. Giving $250 each were John F. and Louise Arner Boyd, James W. Cochrane, E. B. McNear, Robert Dollar, James L. Flood of San Francisco, Frank H. Johnson, John Martin of Ross, and Robert Watt of Oakland. Baron J. H. Von Schroeder gave $125. Fifteen other gave $100 each, nine gave $50 each, 14 gave $25, three gave $20, and four gave $10. All are named in the deed.

Informed of the deed restriction, Ella May Minneman, president of the library board, said the board now will concentrate on plans for enlarging the library on its present site.

Deputies Kill Inmate In Bid For Freedom In San Jose Jail

SAN JOSE (UPI) — Three prisoners took a secretary and a deputy sheriff hostage today in an attempt to escape from the Santa Clara County Jail 100 yards from the site of the Angela Davis trial. (See trial story, page 14.)

Sheriff's officers, in a gun battle on the second floor of the jail, overpowered the convicts two hours later and rescued the hostages unharmed.

Newsmen waiting outside heard at least one shot fired, as deputies and officers rushed inside the building.

A few minutes later, a sheriff's spokesman said all three inmates had been captured and the hostages were not harmed. An ambulance was pulled up to the entrance of the jail, but there was no immediate word on injuries.

Sheriff's officers killed one of the inmates on the second floor of the jail, overpowered the other two, and rescued the hostages unharmed.

The incident, unrelated but strikingly similar to the 1970 Marin County shootings in which Miss Davis is charged, started about 8:40 a. m. when a convict grabbed a secretary and a deputy at knifepoint.

He was later apprehended but three other inmates took his place, holding the hostages until the shot rang out about 10:55 a. m.

A crowd of about 400 persons gathered outside an open ramp leading into the jail when the end of the aborted escape came.

Officers shouted to the spectators to get down. They flattened on pavements and got behind cars.

Deputies on the rooftops had earlier trained their rifles on a driveway leading out of the jail's underground garage, in case the inmates tried to break out in a car they had ordered brought to the jail building.

The Davis trial, which was to resume 100 yards away in the Santa Clara County Hall of Justice, was called off for the day and newsmen were ordered out of its downstairs pressroom.

Six Die In Terrorist Bombing In Phnom Penh

SAIGON (UPI) — A terrorist bomb exploded today in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Pehn, killing six persons and the Cambodian government warned residents to arm themselves and dig trenches in preparation for a possible Communist attack on the city.

Phnom Penh was resupplied with fuel, ammunition and general cargo today when a Mekong River convoy arrived under escort of 35 gunboats, helicopters and observation planes but the convoy still came under attack by B40 and recoilless rifle fire and one vessel was damaged.

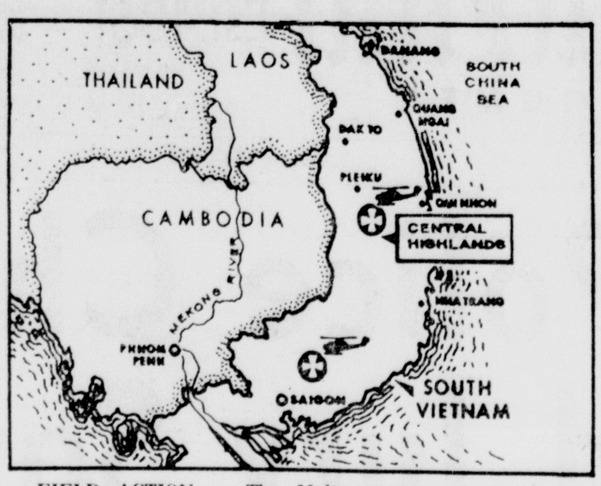

The growing threat to Phnom Penh overshadowed action in South Vietnam where there was fighting in Kontum Province in the Central Highlands and where one American was killed when Communists shot down or damaged five helicopters in two separate incidents.

UPI correspondent Kate Webb reported from Phnom Penh that the tiny Cambodian air force was bombing Communist troop concentrations within a 30-mile radius of Phnom Penh. There was renewed fighting near the Angkor Wat ruins and more heavy Communist attacks 70 miles south of Phnom Penh.

The Cambodian Command said it had no casualty figures on the latest Communist attack on a South Vietnamese tank base 70 miles to the south but the Communists have inflicted heavy losses there in a series of attacks the past week. A spokesman reported four killed and 26 wounded in fighting near Angkor Wat, 150 miles northwest of Phnom Penh. v Phnom Penh underwent a heavy rocket attack last week which killed 112 persons, and terrorists operating in daylight blew up a span of a major bridge. Today a person in military uniform lobbed a grenade at an air force bus, killing six persons, three of them children, and seriously wounding two others.

Phnom Penh authorities said the high command, following the rocket attack, had ordered the 1.5 million inhabitants of the capital to arm themselves and dig trenches under their houses. The command said the Communists had threatened to attack Phnom Penh "on March 24, 29th and April 3."

Intelligence sources said the 101D Regiment of the Viet Cong 1st Division had moved to within striking distance of Phnom Penh in the past week and that heavy weapons units are apparently within easy marching distance.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Boyle Testifies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United Mine Workers President W. A. (Tony) Boyle said yesterday he relied on advice of the late John L. Lewis and the union's legal office in authorizing political contributions the government alleges were illegal.

Boyle took the witness stand in his own defense yesterday in U.S. District Court against charges he and two other UMW officials funneled $49,500 illegally to politicians.

Judge Charles R. Richey indicated he might send the case to the jury today, following two or three more witnesses and closing arguments.

Historic Vote

NABLUS, Israeli — Occupied Jordan (UPI) — The first elections permitted in any Arab territory captured by Israel in 1967 got under way without incident today as part of what Israeli officials hailed as the normalization of life under their rule.

Occupation spokesmen reported heavy turnouts in all nine communities in the West Bank of the Jordan River where municipal councils were being chosen for the first time since 1963. In a 10th, there were seven candidates for seven seats, so no polling was necessary.

Protests Arrest

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The Venezuelan embassy yesterday formally protested the arrest of former El Salvadorian presidential candidate Jose Napolen Duarte at the home of a Venezuelan diplomat.

Duarte was charged with supporting an unsuccessful weekend coup against President Fidel Sanchez Hernandez by forcing his way into a radio station and urging El Salvadorians to help in the uprising. He was arrested later at the home of Gonzalo Espina Faria, first secretary of the Venezuelan embassy.

Academy Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., moved today to try to break the men only admissions rule at the nation's military academies by introducing a resolution that would put Congress on record against the barrier.

Declaring that women should not be denied admission solely on the basis of sex, Javits said he hoped the sense of the Congress resolution would end the all-male tradition once and for all.

But Rep. Jack H. McDonald, R-Mich., who introduced the companion resolution in the House, said he would also seek legislation to force the secretaries of the Navy, Army and Air Force to accept women if the resolution failed to change their policies.

A Flaming Death

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A Newark College of Engineering honor student, voted "most likely to succeed" by his high school classmates, died early today of burns suffered when he doused himself with gasoline and set himself ablaze.

A spokesman for the New Jersey College of Medicine and Dentistry announced that Scott MacDonald, 22, of Lodi, died at Martland Medical Center.

His death leaves unexplained his reasons for setting himself on fire. "Nobody knows why he did this," said John Hemeleski, associate public relations director for the college.

Health Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senior member of the House Ways and Means Committee today proposed a "National Health Services Act" that would have employers and the federal government share in the costs of health insurance for citizens regardless of their age or income.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., ranking Democrat behind the chairman of the committee that is expected to open hearings this spring on national health insurance proposals, said in remarks prepared for introduction of his measure that it would be put into effect in phases spread over five years.

Ullman said his bill, endorsed by the American Hospital Association, would be financed by a "combination of payroll taxes and general revenues with the main emphasis on the latter," but he did not put a price tag on the measure.

Water Debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has set its sights on a national goal of pollution-free waters by 1985 as it began work on a $24.6 billion water cleanup bill its sponsors described as the largest non-defense money authorization in congressional history.

At the close of four hours of general debate yesterday, the chief sponsors of the legislation claimed enough votes to beat a coalition of House members who will attempt extensive amendments in hopes of strengthening the bill.

Reps. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., and John D. Dingell, D-Mich., are leading a bipartisan group of 40 House members who say they want to make the measure stronger by adopting Senate-approved provisions limiting pollution discharges.

But John A. Blatnik, D-Minn., chairman of the House Public Works Committee, and a number of committee members argued that their bill would achieve the Senate goals using more workable hethods.

Yemeni Unrest

BEIRUT (UPI) — Prime Minister Mohsen Al Aini of North Yemen said today South Yemeni troops have occupied a border village in his country and launched attacks against numerous other towns, killing women and children.

Despite these provocations, he told a news conference, North Yemen was doing its "utmost to keep the peace."

Relations between the two Yemens, situated at the tip of the Arabian Peninsula, have deteriorated sharply in recent weeks. Each accused the other of massing troops along the common border and attacking settlements.

To Make Run

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Rep. Allard K. Lowenstein, a leader in the "dump Johnson" movement in 1968, announced yesterday he would run for Congress in the June 20 primary against veteran Rep. John Rooney.

Lowenstein told a news conference which was attended by about a dozen leaders of reform Democrat clubs he would "send Brooklyn's 'invisible congressman,' John Rooney, into his long overdue retirement."

Rooney, in a statement issued by his office in Washington, said "the people of my congressional district have seen 'carpetbaggers' before and have turned them down as I am sure they will this time."

'Soledad Brothers' Found Innocent In Guard's Death

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The two surviving "Soledad Brothers" gave a thumbs up salute Monday when an all-white jury found them innocent of murder, but prison life is not over for the pair of convicts.

Defendants John Clutchette, 28, and Fleeta Drumgo, 26, were handcuffed and whisked back to San Quentin Prison following the verdict in the most heavily-guarded trial in San Francisco judicial history.

"Most of you have doubted the system," Judge S. Lee Vavuris said. "But you now know that it really works, and if anyone can come up with a better system, I'd like to see it. The 12 jurors have spoken."

The Soledad case has been linked by the state as a possible motive for the Marin County shootings of 1970 for which Angela Davis is on trial. The state claims Miss Davis plotted the kidnaping of a judge to gain the "Soledad Brothers" release.

Drumgo, Clutchette and a third defendant, black revolutionary George Jackson, were serving time for burglary at Soledad State Prison in January, 1970 when they were accused of killing correctional officer John V. Mills.

Mills, 26, was beaten and tossed from a third-tier railing three days after a white guard killed three black inmates during an exercise yard brawl.

Jackson was killed last August in an alleged escape attempt from San Quentin in which three guards and two inmate trusties died.

Drumgo is one of six prisoners charged with the guards' deaths, which occurred inside the maximum security Adjustment Center. Clutchette, presumably, is eligible for parole.

The prosecution at Angela Davis' trial in San Jose claims Miss Davis plotted the kidnaping of a judge in San Rafael to gain release of the "Soledad Brothers" because she was in love with Jackson.

After being informed of the acquittal of Drumgo and Clutchette, Miss Davis' attorney, Howard Moore Jr., told newsmen the verdict proved their trial was "a political frame-up from the start." "It is a complete vindication of the Soledad Brothers," Moore said. "The only thing I regret is that George Jackson did not live to see it."

Boston Scientist Reveals Way Of Stunting The Cancer Tumor

CLEARWATER BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—A Boston scientist said Monday that his laboratory has found a way to stunt the growth of cancer tumors.

Dr. Judah Folkman, surgeon in chief at Boston Children's Hospital Medical Center, said that tumors can be restricted to the size of grass seed by shutting off their lifeline and rendering them harmless. He added that he is hopeful that an antibody to immunize humans against tumor growth will be available in two to five years.

Folkman made his announcement at a seminar for science writers conducted by the American Cancer Society.

In another development, Dr. John H. Frenster, assistant professor of medicine at the Stanford University School of Medicine, said that his studies have shown that drugs or chemicals to treat cancer can be used in much smaller doses than originally was believed.

The significance of this is that high dosage levels have been having adverse side effects. His experiments show that dosages of about half the usual levels are sufficient, thereby avoiding the side effects.

Folkman said his laboratory now is trying to isolate an antibody or chemical agent which will block the lifeline of cancer tumors and thus retard their growth.

He said he expects the compound to be ready for humans within five years. Other scientists at the meeting said it was one of the most exciting discoveries in cancer research in three decades and expressed confidence that the compound would be found.

Folkman explained that as cancer cells divide by the millions, they cluster together to form a tumor. As the tumor grows, it needs more and more capillaries or arteries to sustain its growth.

The tumor sends out a chemical signal called a tumorangiogenesis factor (TAF) to stimulate the production of these arteries. Interference with TAF results in stunted growth for the tumor.

Span Jumper Is Reported; No Trace

A man jumped off the east side of the Golden Gate Bridge's center span yesterday at 5 p.m., according to bridge personnel report to the Coast Guard.

A Coast Guard spokesman said a 44-foot boat was sent to search for the body, with no results.

Treaty Would Ban Chemical Weapons

GENEVA (UPI)—The Soviet Union today introduced a draft treaty at the 25-nation Geneva Disarmament Conference to ban the development, production, stockpiling or acquisition of chemical weapons.

The Soviet proposal was the first draft treaty for a chemical weapons ban since the conference agreed last year to forbid biological weapons. The germ warfare treaty committed its signers to work as rapidly as possible on a chemical weapons treaty.

The British Foreign Office announced today in London that Britain, the United States and Russia will sign a convention prohibiting the development, production and stockpiling of biological weapons on April 10 in the three capitals.

A U.S. spokesman said his delegation would study the new Soviet proposal but felt it was too early in the negotiations to begin focusing on a treaty draft. A week ago the United States presented a working paper listing a number of questions on chemical weapons for study before the drafting of an actual treaty begins.

The Soviet treaty proposal would bind nations signing it to destroy or divert to peaceful uses as soon as possible all chemical agents of warfare or weapons as well as means of delivery already in their possession.

It also:

—Would pledge signatories not to transfer chemical agents or weapons to other states or help them in acquiring such weapons.

—Would set up a system of verification by having complaints of suspected violations filed with the U.N. Security Council.

—Would fix an international conference to review the ban's operation five years after it went into force.

—Would provide an escape clause allowing a signatory state to withdraw in case of "extraordinary events jeopardizing its supreme interests".

Alexei A. Roschin, the Soviet Ambassador to the conference, presented his country's proposed treaty.

In an additional development at today's conference session, Japanese Ambassador Masahiro Nisibori urged the United States and the Soviet Union to stop all large nuclear tests immediately.

Nisibori said all underground testing which creates shocks greater than a measurement of 5.75 on a 10-point seismological scale should cease as a first step towards the end of all nuclear testing.

He said existing technical devices can identify such explosions — the equivalent of 250,000 tons of conventional explosives—with only two or three seismological stations worldwide.

7th SALT Round Opens In Helsinki

HELSINKI (UPI)—U.S. and Soviet negotiators, seeking a historic agreement limiting both defensive and offensive nuclear weapons, today opened the seventh round of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with a 90-minute meeting.

Conference sources described the atmosphere as "serious and businesslike as usual."

U.S. chief negotiator Gerard C. Smith and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir S. Semenov "picked up today where they left off in Vienna" where the sixth SALT round ended Feb. 4, the sources said.

Both sides presented statements, which apparently contained little new, diplomatic sources said. There was no indication that the two sides had solved the differences concerning which offensive weapons systems to include in an interim agreement, these sources said.

Smith and Semenov agreed to meet again in the U.S. Embassy on Thursday, the conference sources said. They also agreed to resume work in separate technical working groups which discuss various technical aspects of a possible agreement.

As has been the custom since SALT began in November, 1969, no outside issues were mentioned in today's talks, the sources said. Neither were there any references to the optimistic statements made recently by President Nixon and the Soviet leadership.

President Nixon and other administration officials have held out hope for an agreement covering antiballistic missiles (ABMs) and an interim accord on offensive weapons being reached before Nixon goes to Moscow May 22.

But the sources warned that the differences on offensive weapons and other connected problems may require more time. "There may be an agreement in time for Nixon visit or there may not be one," one conference source said.

Low Key Finale By Berrigan Prosecutor

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—The government told the Harrisburg Seven jury today that letters to and from the Rev. Philip Berrigan in prison in 1970 formed "a chronicle of activities that were the evolution of conspiracy" by the anti-war activist group.

The government wound up its case against Berrigan and six other vigorous opponents of the Vietnam War with a lengthy, low-key summation by William Connelly, 32, of Toledo, Ohio, an assistant U.S. attorney on special assignment as a prosecutor.

Standing behind a lectern directly facing the nine women, three man jury on which there is one Catholic and one black, Connelly said the letters were damning evidence of the group's urge to "escalate...escalate...escalate..." the drive against U.S involvement in Vietnam.

The seven are charged with conspiring in 1970 to kidnap Henry A. Kissinger, blow up Washington heating tunnels and vandalize draft boards to bring public attention to their cause.

The group was anxious to recruit young people to the movement, Connelly said. He said that even in prison, where he had been sent for draft board raiding, Berrigan was looking for "people who had the 'obvious' talent he wanted."

Connelly quoted from a letter Berrigan had written to Sister Elizabeth McAlister, a defendant, telling of "some of the young guys here—who more and more, sit in on the raps—car thieves, bank robbers, old and experienced cons for all their young ages... What an injection they'll add to our movement...obvious talents at our disposal."

Connelly said that one of the final government witnesses, Mrs. Carolyn North of Harrisburg, appeared at the last minute as "in every sense of the word a volunteer witness."

Mrs. North testified that in mid-June of 1970 Sister Elizabeth startled a meeting of Westchester County, N.Y., women with a speech about renewed action by the movement.

Scott Will Push For Ending Kleindienst Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott charged following a meeting with President Nixon today that the Democratic investigation of the ITT case and of the nomination of Attorney General-designate Richard G. Kleindienst was "some form of political jackassery."

Scott restated his plan when the Senate returns next week from Easter vacation to move to end the investigation of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. (ITT) offer of $400,000 to underwrite the Republican National Convention in San Diego and its possible connection with a favorable settlement of an antitrust suit.

Meeting with White House reporters, Scott charged that the injection of the Kleindienst confirmation proceedings into the ITT investigation was irrelevant, political and master-minded by Democratic National Chairman Lawrence J. O'Brien.

"Most logical men and women would agree this has been a frantic exercise in continuing ungermaneness," Scott said. "This whole business of running for office is a little bit degrading because all of us have to engage in some form of political jackassery."

He said that the ITT inquiry "had long passed its perhelion."

Scott said the members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee were "slobbering" to investigate charges by columnist Jack Anderson that ITT attempted to conspire with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to intervene in the election of Chile President Salvatore Allende.

At the Capitol, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said questions still surround Kleindienst's nomination and he hoped the judiciary committee "wouldn't move too fast" in ending the hearings.

"As long as the hearings are reopened, at the request of Mr. Kleindienst I might add, this legitimate inquiry should continue until all matters are resolved," Mansfield said.

Mansfield said that if the committee ends its inquiry, he would honor any "holds" placed on the nomination "for a reasonable time." A hold is a request that a nomination remain on the calendar without action.

came armed with a briefcase of notes and documents, was confined to cross-examination by Shaw after Myers introduced as evidence notes Souza had made of closed meetings Feb. 12, 1968, and April 28, 1969.

Backed by the notes he took at the meetings Souza stuck by statements of a week earlier when he said the 1968 closed meeting dealt solely with a letter attacking David J. Sumbardo, then city administrator.

Sumbardo and two former councilmen testified that clerk matron Marsha Kittelman's undercover narcotics work was discussed at the 1968 meeting, but Souza said that was "absolutely not" the case.

One of more than 20 charges against Orr is that he made Mrs. Kittelman a policewoman without authority in 1968, thus exposing the city to damages for false arrest.

Souza said the 1969 closed meeting was called because firemen complained Mrs. Kittelman was leaving the police station unmanned too much.

Following that session, Souza said, "It was clear in my mind that if Mrs. Kittelman was to continue on in helping the undercover narcotics people, it was to be on her own time." Time spent in court was to come from her vacation, he said.

After Orr was fired by City Administrator Robert E. Crowe Sept. 30, Souza was one of three councilmen who voted to uphold the firing, which Orr then appealed to the board of review.

Among charges compiled by Crowe are allegations that Orr showed favoritism to and engaged in improper social relations with Mrs. Kittelman, was drunk in public on several occasions, failed to set up procedures and training, dismissed parking tickets without justification, threatened officers with violence, failed to provide security and failed to report liquor law violations to the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

Shaw was more painstaking in cross-examining Souza than he had been with previous witnesses. At two points he consulted a series of direct quotes from Souza's initial testimony which had been extracted from tapes. He often resorted to asking the same question up to five times.

Myers at one point objected to the tactic, but Shaw countered, "I agree with that. That is the third or fourth time and I haven't got a single answer yet."

At issue was a statement by San Anselmo Inspector Bernard Del Santo that Souza and councilman Lee Nelder told him they were out to fire Orr.

"I am denying that the three of us ever got together in a discussion along those lines," Souza said.

He also disclaimed other attempts by Shaw to show he had been part of a conspiracy to oust Orr.

In the 1970 campaign, he said, "My platform issue one was the social permissiveness that was pervading our city."

Shaw told the board, "I think the testimony will disclose this was one of the bones they (Souza and Nelder) had to pick with the chief."

But Souza said that although rumors flew both in 1968 and 1970 that he was out to fire Orr, each time he told Orr the rumors were myth. "I reassured him as long as he did his job he wouldn't have anything to worry about," Souza said.

Souza also gave testimony on the Pavilion incident in which Orr is accused of having struck a fellow officer during a melee while under the influence of liquor.

"He had an aroma of alcohol on his breath, but I wouldn't say he was drunk," Souza said.

The councilman said he interviewed about a dozen persons at the Pavilion and at least five said the chief was under the influence of alcohol.

None, however, would sign an affidavit for him and the district attorney later cleared Orr with the letter that sparked Myers' outburst.

Souza also stood by testimony that Bella Aaron, head of Marin's police-community relations program, told the council in closed session that Orr "should have psychiatric care" and again said former Mayor George A. Pagni was inaccurate in saying the council unanimously supported Orr after the chief's arrest in 1967 for disturbing the peace at a San Rafael dance hall.

Souza's testimony drew a crowd of about 40 which soon swelled to more than 60, one of the biggest turnouts since the hearings began in November.

The councilman will take the stand again at 7:30 p.m. today at the Fairfax Women's Club.

Pro-Park District Group Seeks Delay

A group supporting creation of an autonomous regional park district requested county officials today to delay consideration of the proposal for two months.

The regional district, supported by People for Parks and Open Space, was scheduled to be considered April 12 by the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission.

However, in a letter filed today, the group said it wanted the proposal continued to June so it can assess advantages of the countywide park district, proposed and supported by county supervisors.

Both proposals are aimed at creating an agency to acquire scenic open space in the eastern section of Marin.

Supervisors last week endorsed the countywide district which would replace the county parks and recreation department and would have a tax rate of 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation. (The parks and recreation department was allocated 12 cents per $100 last year.)

The countywide district, while having a separate tax rate, would be governed by the board of supervisors and would require voter approval.

Carol Staley of Corte Madera, cochairman of the People for Parks group, said the group will seek to have the countywide district board expanded to include two separately elected representatives besides the supervisors.

Also, the group will seek that 80 per cent of the funds collected by the district be earmarked for land acquisition with the remaining 20 per cent for administration and management, she said.

If in two months the group becomes dissatisfied with the county's proposal, she said, it will again propose the autonomous regional district.

and at a "lesser host of persons, who, not to be outdone, appear to have jumped on the bandwagon."

Bennett, whose arrest by the Sausalito police for drunken driving triggered the grand jury inquiry, criticized the panel last week for overlooking reported department practices more serious than arrest quotas.

The association said, "We do not, as a group, intend to lower our professional quality or compromise our integrity as a result of pressure or slanderous insinuations."

JAIL

shotguns swarmed over both buildings. Both were sealed off. Miss Davis and her four attorneys were denied entrance when they first arrived, but later let in.

Then today's session of the trial was called off, while newsmen, spectators, and bystanders collected behind a restraining fence near the entrance to the jail, in case the car the convicts demanded emerged from there.

One of the convicts involved was identified as John Eddie Brown, 26, held for kidnaping and conspiracy.

His brother, Larry Brown, said he went in to talk Brown into surrendering and found he had been recaptured. But he said three other inmates were holding the hostages.

Virtually the entire press corps collected from around the world to cover the Davis trial was covering the jailbreak—including courtroom sketch artists, busily sketching the jail building.

One of the hostages was identified as Sue Kanimoto, a Japanese-American medical secretary. The other was an unidentified deputy.

Sheep-Killer Vigil Continues

Ranchers near Tomales are continuing their all-night alert for a vicious dog that has already killed or crippled 88 sheep.

The dog last attacked on Friday night, and Walter Burbank, owner of one of the three terrorized ranches believes that the dog has probably been tied-up by its owner, unaware of his pet's killer instincts.

Burbank and others believe the killing will resume whenever the dog runs free again.

Driver Treated For Cut Hand

Charles Cannon, 66, of 45 Grove Lane, San Anselmo, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut left hand received in an accident Saturday, according to hospital reports.

Cannon was going east on Fourth Street at 5:20 p.m. when his car hit the rear of a car stopped at Ross Valley Drive, according to police. Earl Stanford Harris, 32, of Santa Rosa was the driver of the other car.

Deadline Reminder

Mrs. Jacques J. Nadler, chairman of the Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club music scholarship committee, has issued a reminder that the deadline is Friday for receiving applications for the $250 music scholarship the club is offering. Further information and application blanks may be obtained by calling her at her home in Mill Valley.

Marin As 'Research Lab' Urged

A Novato resident, seeking to stimulate new ideas on community problems, has proposed establishing a private Marin institute in conjunction with Indian Valley Colleges.

Herbert W. Cook Jr., cochairman of the Novato Citizens' Creek Committee, proposed the institute in a sweeping 15-page proposal submitted to the committee for study.

The proposed institute could offer a course in "community evaluation and management, using all of Marin County as a research laboratory," he said.

The course would "cover all aspects of our community: taxes, land use, schools, planning, growth, youth, senior citizens, medical facilities, police, fire, civic groups, industry or lack of industry, commission, environment, welfare, recreation, parks, transportation, flood control, and estimated community potential and desires," Cook said.

Such an overall analysis would allow the community to establish guidelines and would provide "in essence a factual community manual for citizens, students, prospective employees and candidates for political office, he said.

Communities "can easily, through lack of community management and awareness" lose conrol of their destiny, Cook warned.

The institute could obtain "seed money" from donations and grants and promote new concepts, Cook said.

As money-making projects, he proposed establishing a "Novato Creek Press," as "an objective and analytical literary vehicle" which could provide a "practical and progressive direction for this nation," and a "Marin loose-leaf library" that would carry divergent views on special9issues in a community.

He stressed the problem of supporting community colleges by property taxes and said: "We must make, through the Marin institute, the Indian Valley Colleges a profit-making productive community industry."

Cook also proposed that Marin County be designated a "demonstration project" where a variety of environmental projects could be achieved.

ULSTER

ful man in the country," he said. "If he can command the following of all these people there is nothing he can't do." He paused.

"And by the look of things there's nothing they won't do for him."

The first day of Craig's two-day protest strike Monday massed a crowd of 20,000 in front of Belfast's city hall. By midnight Protestants clashed with British troops in the towns of Portadown and Lurgan south of Belfast for the first time in nearly one year.

And the violence took two more lives today—two men kiled when a bomb explosion outside a police station in Limavady caught their car as they passed. They were the 289th and 290th to die since violence broke out in August, 1969.

Young men in shirtsleeves, blind to the rain and winds which lashed the marchers, hammered huge drums. Bagpipes shrilled Protestant anthems: "The Sash My Father Wore", honoring Orange Order sashes, and "Derry's Wall," a hymn to the relief by Protestants of a Londonderry besieged by Roman Catholics in 1690.

Throughout the afternoon chants of "We want Craig!" echoed across the beautiful grounds of Stormont Castle, for more than half a century a symbol of Protestant supremacy.

(In London, William Whitelaw, Britain's newly-named Secretary for Northern Ireland, appealed to the Protestant majority in Ulster to help find a solution to its troubles when the present two-day general strike ends.

"One can understand, even if one cannot accept, the feelings that have been given expression in the two-day strike," Whitelaw said. "I hope once that is over, they will settle down and indeed seek with all concerned to find a solution.")

"Our endeavors to provide a just government for Ulster have been betrayed by London," retiring Premier Brian Faulkner told the cheering crowd police said surpassed 100,000. Marchers converged on the buildings in East Belfast by car, bus, bicycle and foot, many marching in step to the boom of Protestant Orange Order drums in defiance of a government ban on parades.

British troops, deployed to prevent any recurrence of Protestant violence against the Roman Catholics they outnumber three to one, lined the five mile route from Belfast center to Stormont Castle grounds.

Lashing rain fell.

"Joining the (Irish) Republic, we reject," Faulkner said. "Independence is such nonsense for Ulster. We will not separate from the United Kingdom because the United Kingdom belongs to us."

A strike by up to 300,000 workers against the suspension of parliament and direct British rule imposed by British Prime Minister Edward Heath brought public services and normal life to a near standstill for the second day.

Kreins had lured Wright to Sausalito from the Hayward Police Department where Kreins had been chief before moving to Sausalito.

Fraass, 27, has been with the Sausalito police since 1966, served on the Belvedere force before that.

Malkin, 30, joined the Sausalito police in September 1967 after working in Fremont. He was appointed captain in February 1969.

Imlay mentioned the difficulties of trying to fire a policeman brought to light by the battle to fire Police Sgt. Thomas H. Zink. A Marin Superior Court Judge ordered Zink reinstated in January and the city has appealed.

Meanwhile, the city faces millions of dollars in damage suits, charging false arrest.

Deed Accepted For New City Offices

The Rohnert Park City Council accepted the deed for property on Commerce Boulevard for its new city office building in a special session last night.

City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan reported that construction is under way and that the building should be complete before the Aug. 1 deadline. Cotati School District will share office space in the building with the city.

Guilty Plea To Selling Of Heroin

Christopher Austin Fenn, 24, of San Rafael yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of selling heroin. He is to be sentenced May 8.

Fenn was arrested Oct. 7 on a warrant charging that he sold $60 worth of the narcotic to a drug agent on Aug. 3.

officers to perform for the sake of statistics."

The report said officers' reports occasionally were compared to those of others, and that Fraass or the sergeants often graded performances with such written rankings as "good," "O.K.," "low," "needs improvement" or "work on low areas." A sample activity report, containing the rankings, was enclosed to the jury's report.

As reported previously in news stories, the jury said "young officers who produced a high level of activity were praised for 'eager aggressiveness' on their evaluation reports. In addition, officers who did not meet the expectations (even when at times their production was considerable) were informed that if they did not meet them their probationary period would be extended or their pay raises deferred.

"On two occasions an officer was sent out at the end of his shift on his own time until he found and wrote a moving violation."

The jury blamed the production emphasis on a "lack of competent leadership by the chief." The jury said "he refuses to be concerned about the methods his sergeants use to motivate the patrolmen. He says that is 'none of his business' as chief."

The panel termed insufficient the training given new officers, consisting of two weeks under Fraass and four weeks of on the job with a veteran officer. A high turnover rate, blamed by the jury on "poor administration," also was noted, although the panel said departures from the force had stabilized recently.

The jury called upon the Sausalito City Council to "improve the situation" by writing guidelines for common situations in which officers "have to exercise discretion, including decisions on whether or not to arrest or cite in specific situations involving specific crimes." It acknowledged, however, that such guidelines were rare.

New Poland President Named

WARSAW (UPI)—Prof. Henryk Jablonski, 62, was elected president of Poland by parliament today, completing the 15-month-old power takeover by Communist party leader Edward Gierek.

Jablonski replaces 60-year-old Jozef Cyrankiewicz, who has held the posts of Premier, Deputy Premier and President continuously since Feb. 7, 1947.

Jablonski, Minister of Education since 1965 and a member of the Communist Party's 11-man Politburo since December, last year, was the sole candidate for president.

Only Two Filed In Council Race

Friday's deadline for filing to run for a seat on the Marin City Council is approaching and only two persons have filed, acording to Rev. Samuel L. Banks, council chairman. Five of nine seats are open.

"The community is urged to have interested citizens pick up petitions and file them by 5 p.m. Friday," he said.

The two candidates are Mrs. Royce McLamore and Ernest Small, an incumbent.

Election date is April 4, and the only polling place is at the old firehouse in Marin City, according to Banks.

Deadline Delay For Execution

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)— Kidnapers of a Fiat auto executive today extended the deadline for his "execution" a second time and lowered their ransom demands for his release.

The group, members of a Trotskyite organization called The Revolutionary Army of the People, said they would shoot Oberdan Sallustro, director of Fiat in Argentina, at midnight tonight unless the demands were met. Their earlier deadline was at midnight Monday.

OBITUARIES

Long A Marin Resident, S. Scotto Is Dead At 85

Salvatore Scotto, former Marin tavern owner and longtime county resident, died yesterday in a local convalescent home after a short illness. He was 85.

Scotto, who last resided at 214 Mission Avenue, San Rafael, was in the tavern business for about 25 years and at one time owned Travelers Inn in San Rafael.

Born in Italy, he came to the Bay Area in 1913, followed six years later by his wife, Amelia. The couple, married near Naples in 1910, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in 1950.

When Mrs. Scotto arrived in the Bay Area, the couple lived in Novato for a short time, then moved to San Rafael in 1920. Mrs. Scotto died last September.

Scotto was a member of San Rafael Aerie 256 of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Survivors are four sons, Michael and Guido of San Rafael, Hugo of Novato and Vincent of Mill Valley; a daughter, Rosemary Thierfeldt of Marinwood; a brother, Benjamin of Italy; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow at St. Raphael's Church, San Rafael, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. today at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael. The family prefers donations to a favorite charity.

J.D. ALBERTON

James D. Albertoni, 53, Petaluma milk distributor, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital after a nine-month illness. Albertoni was born in Nicasio and was reared there and in San Rafael.

He was a graduate of San Rafael High School and had operated a milk transportation business for many years.

Albertoni was a member of the Native Sons of the Golden West, Nicasio Parlor 183, Sons of Italy and teamsters Local 624. He lived at 515 Sunnyslope Avenue.

He is survived by his wife, Elsie; a son, Richard Albertoni; a daughter, Linda Albertoni; a brother, Leo Albertoni, all of Petaluma; and two sisters, Mary Barboni of Petaluma and Josephine Fitch of Stockton.

Funeral will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at St. Vincent DePaul Church, Petaluma. Burial will be at Calvary Cemetery. Recitation of the Rosary will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Sorensen Funeral Home. Contributions may be made to any charity.

O.A. GRONBERG

Funeral for Oscar A. Gronberg, 81, of San Francisco, a former Petaluma resident, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Thursday at Sorensen Funeral Home, Petaluma.

Gronberg died Sunday at a San Francisco hospital after a short illness. He was born and reared in Norway and moved to San Francisco in 1910. Gronberg lived in Petaluma for a short time, but spent most of his life in San Francisco where he owned and operated Geary Street Furniture Store until his retirement eight years ago.

Gronberg was a member of Henrik Ibsen Lodge 7, Sons of Norway.

He is survived by his wife, Maren Chirstine; two sons, Richard and Henry Gronberg of Novato; two brothers, Thorleif Gronberg of Deerfield Park, Fla., and Sigurd Gronberg of Norway; a sister Margit Gronberg of Norway, and four grandchildren.

Burial will be at Cypress Hill Memorial Park. Contributions may be made to the American Heart Fund.

Driver Of Death Car Arraigned

Eric Ansley Van Horn, 21, of Mill Valley, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on felony charges of drunken driving and manslaughter stemming from the death of a 19-year-old youth in an accident Saturday afternoon.

Bail for Van Horn was set at $10,000. He was to return to court Monday to enter pleas to the charges.

Van Horn was the driver of a pickup truck which went over a bank near Panoramic Highway, according to highway patrol officers.

A passenger, Eric Bryant Saterlie, 19, also of Mill Valley was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Phone Company Picket Line Up

Operators continued picketing Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. today in what union officials said was not a strike but was to call attention to discrimination hiring and promotion practices.

Picketing started Friday at the office at 860 Las Gallinas Avenue and was being carried on yesterday and today at the office at 914 Mission Avenue, San Rafael.

"This is strictly a local matter and not the policy of the higher management in the company," said Bernard V. Chiaravalle, president of Communications Workers of America Local 9404.

Santa Rosan Pleads Innocent In Assault

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Larry S. Coffey, 20, of Santa Rosa, has pleaded innocent in Central Sonoma Municipal Court to a rape charge.

Judge Frank Passalacqua set bail at $12,500 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Monday. Coffey was arrested March 22 on suspicion of raping an 18-year-old Sonoma State College coed in an oatfield off East Cotati Avenue near the college.

$126,000 Novato Planning Budget Urged In 1972-73

Novato Planning Commissioners last night recommended a $126,510 planning department budget for 1972-73, up $20,300 from the current budget.

Planning director Brian W. Mattson said the proposed budget includes $13,000 for an environmental consultant to assist in preparing an environmental plan and $5,000 in matching funds for a state-required study of geological hazards.

The budget also retains a planning technician, now working under the emergency employment act, and increases a half-time typist-clerk to full-time.

The Novato Planning Commission also:

TENNIS CLUB — Granted the Olive Ridge Tennis Club a use permit to develop tennis courts and a parking area on the portion of its 30-acre site at Olive Avenue and Deer Island Lane, lying within the Novato Creek flood plain.

SUTRO OAKS — Granted Olompali Investment Inc. a variance to prepare a master plan for all but 1.72 acres of a 13.10-acre cite on the east side of Sutro Avenue, opposite Pleasant Valley School, and set consideration of the plan for April 24, with a recommendation that the maximum dwelling units permitted be 43.

PACHECO RANCH — Set April 10 at 8 p.m. to consider prezoning of the 500-acre former Pacheco Ranch, south of Loma Verda, where Perl Mack Enterprises plans to construct about 700 dwellings.

HOUSING — Adjounred until 8 p.m. Monday for a public hearing on the housing element to the general plan at the Novato community house.

Burglary Case Jail Sentence

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court yesterday placed Thomas Eric Grayson, 21, of San Rafael, on probation for three years and ordered him to jail for 60 days for a burglary conviction.

Grayson had earlier admitted burglarizing a residence on Woods Street in San Rafael on Nov. 24.

Another man arrested with him, Robert Louis Arnett II, 22, also of San Rafael, is currently serving a 10-month jail sentence.

Judge Gardiner yesterday also ordered Grayson to work one day a week for the county parks and recreation department for three months after he is released from jail.

Larkspur Plan Body To Meet

The Larkspur Planning Commission will hold its first public hearing on proposed development policies and rules governing study districts at its regular meeting at 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The policies were prepared by consultants Mocine and Williams of San Francisco to reflect the priorities of residents who attended development policy conferences.

The study zone proposal would permit the city to place any property facing an unusual change in suspension until the area is restudied.

Also to be discussed are recommendations to the city council on the Preliminary Marin Countywide Plan.

Bagley To Talk On Housing Bills

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, will speak at a luncheon to be held on April 7 by the Committee for Adequate Shelter for All at the old train depot, 930 Tamalpais Avenue, San Rafael.

Bagley will discuss pending state legislation, including his bill to provide state financing aid to low and moderate-income housing.

Advance reservations are being handled by the Marin Senior Coordinating Council at the depot.

Panthers Ask Coverage Of New Program

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The Black Panther party has invited the "established press" to take a first hand look at its new policy of putting down the gun to work within the system.

The Panthars said Monday that "all representatives of the mass media," were welcome to attend the Black Community Survival Conference beginning Wednesday at the Oakland Auditorium.

During the three day event, the Panthers said they would give away 10,000 bags of groceries, give free sickle cell anemia tests and register 10,000 persons to vote.

An invitation to newsmen was free of some of the abusive rhetoric that have often marked Panther statements in the past.

Prison Inmate Is Still Missing

A convicted murderer was still at large this morning following a walkaway late Sunday night from San Quentin's honor farm, according to prison Information Officer Joseph R. O'Brien.

Salvatore Natavidad, 27, from Alameda County, was last seen at 10:30 p.m. Sunday and apparently walked away between that time and the 12:15 a.m. check, O'Brien said.

Natavidad began serving a five-year-to-life sentence for second degree murder in May 1970 and was due for parole consideration in July.

Kentfield Board Discusses Proposed Budget's Implications

Preparing to tackle the 1972-73 budget next month, the Kentfield School District board last night discussed some of the implications and assumptions of the proposed budget of $1,602,000.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said he told the board that the figure, which includes a reserve of $130,000 carried over from this year, will mean a tax rate of $3.10 per $100 assessed valuation if assessed valuation increased 3 per cent and no raise is given. This year's rate is $3.11.

The current budget is $1,638,000, which also includes a reserve of $130,000.

He said each 1 per cent of salary increase will raise the tax rate by two cents.

The Kentfield School District board also:

SUMMER SCHOOL — Authorized $2,000 for use by the summer school run by the parent-teacher association if it spends over its income. Bacich said the association usually needs $600 to $1,000, but may need more this year.

ART FESTIVAL — Gave $300 to the Kentfield School District Art Festival, an exhibition of children's art scheduled for May 21.

LANDSCAPE — Ended a contract with Forster and Kroeger landscape maintenance of Corte Madera, which had kept up the district's grounds for the past 10 years. Bacich said the California State Employees Association pressured the board to drop the firm in favor of district employees.

HEARING BUILDING — Accepted the $18,117 bid of Piombo General Engineering Contractors of San Rafael to build a facility for children with hearing difficulties at Adaline E. Kent School. The state and county will pay for the work, Bacich said.

DENTAL CARE — Discussed dropping the California Dental Service, which recently raised its rates drastically, in favor of AID, a dental plan of the General American Insurance Co. The switch would cut the district bill from $9,200 a year to $8,300, Bacich said.

MEETING DATES — Adjourned to a workshop Tuesday to discuss a proposed policy handbook which will be followed by a second workshop April 5 to discuss staffing improvements with the teachers of Wolfe Grade School and by the regular meeting April 10 when the budget will be discussed. All three meetings begin at 8 p.m. at Wolfe Grade.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

7:56 a.m., San Anselmo — Fire caused $15,500 damage to upper floor of house and contents at 8 Rosemont Avenue; cause under investigation; house owned by P. Bellunmin of San Francisco and rented by Michael Smalley.

11:44 a.m., Marinwood — False alarm at Dixie School.

1:25 p.m., Larkspur — Grass fire at Dougherty Drive and Riviera Circle; cause unknown; burned 100 square feet.

3:10 p.m., Novato — Car fire on Highway 101 at Diablo Avenue, caused by backfire through carburetor; damage estimated at $250 to car owned by Milton I. Moyne of San Francisco.

3:22 p.m., Larkspur — Car fire at 121 Hawthorne Drive, caused by short circuit in wiring in car belonging to Spencer R. Kennedy of 540 E Street, San Rafael; out on arrival of department.

5:05 p.m., Marin City — Fire in locker room at 409 Drake Avenue; cause unknown, no damage; Marin County Fire Department responded.

5:13 p.m., San Rafael area — Fire in clothes dryer at home of Dr. Frank H. Howard of 55 Montecito Road; $100 damage to dryer and $25 damage to clothes; Marin County Fire Department responded.

9:41 p.m., Novato — Car fire at 180 Montego Key in Bel Marin Keys area; caused by trying to start car with top off carburetor; damage estimated at $150 to car owned by Jack Sarin, same address.

8:38 p.m., Marinwood — False alarm at Miller Creek School.

Car Theft Guilt Plea Withdrawn

Kenneth Harvey Hicks, 39-year-old state prison parolee from San Francisco, yesterday was allowed in Marin Superior Court to withdraw his earlier plea of guilty to a car theft charge.

After he pleaded innocent, a jury trial was set for the week of April 10.

Hicks was stopped on Highway 101 last November by a highway patrolman who said the car Hicks was driving was weaving.

Not only did the car turn out to be stolen, it contained paintings Hicks had done during seven years of prison life.

Hicks, who has an eight-page arrest record, reportedly was living in a halfway house for former inmates in San Francisco.

Two Youths Held On Burglary

Two San Rafael youths were arrested today in connection with a house burglary last night.

Richard A. Kisling, 16, of 325 Ironstone Court and Michael D. Mitchell, 18, of 1512 Lincoln Avenue were arrested on suspicion of burglary and possession of stolen property.

They were arrested at 3 a.m. on Lincoln Avenue, according to police, carrying erotic magazines and paperback books. The literature was later identified by Robert J. Gaughan, of 1011 Second Street, San Rafael, as property stolen from his apartment.

Gaughan had reported to police that between 7:30 and 8 p.m. yesterday his apartment had been burgled of approximately $800 in camera equipment.

Kisling was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall while Mitchell was held in Marin County Jail pending a bail hearing this afternoon.

Concern On Growth Of Tidelands

The Mill Valley Planning Commission last night recommended to the city council that it adopt an ordinance controlling development on tidelands within the city.

The commission called for an ordinance similar to regulations imposed by the bay conservation and development commission, according to Planning Director Tom W. Newton.

The commission also recommended that a portion of the city's sign ordinance be amended to clarify regulations governing how many and what size signs can be on a corner building.

At present, said Newton, the ordinance is unclear about whether the owner of such a building can take the square-footage of signs permitted for each face of the building and combine them into one sign, or whether he must have two.

The planning commission also acted on several zoning variance requests.

It approved a conditional use permit to convert a residence at 239 Miller Avenue to a combination medical and professional office building.

Nixon Confers With Hussein On Proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) —King Hussein of Jordan conferred with President Nixon today on his controversial plan to establish a federated kingdom on the east and west banks of the Jordan River.

Hussein arrived in Washington Monday night under heavy security.

The 36-year-old monarch and Nixon met at 11 a.m. in the President's Oval Office. They sat on highbacked gold upholstered chairs before a crackling fire as photographers were permitted into the office for a few minutes of picture taking.

Nixon conferred with Hussein for 90 minutes. The President's national security affairs adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, was present. There was no report on the talks.

Afterwards, Hussein had lunch with Secretary of State William P. Rogers at the State Department.

The White House described Hussein's presence in the United States as a "private visit." It was the fifth time Hussein has been in this country since the Israeli-Arab war in June 1967 and the third time Hussein has met with Nixon in the White House.

They were to meet again at a black tie "working dinner" at the White House hosted by Nixon.

Hussein has proposed a semi-autonomous Palestinian state on the east bank of the Jordan after Israel relinquishes the occupied land. His plan has been rejected by Palestinian guerrilla groups, most of the Arab nations and by Israel.

The White House said Monday that Hussein's plan is "an internal matter."

Hussein was expected to undergo a physical checkup at Walter Reed Army Medical Center later this week. He is suffering from a heart ailment.

Nixon Attacks Congress On Welfare Reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Noting Congress has failed to act on the welfare reform plan he proposed 31 months ago, President Nixon has said there can be "absolutely no excuse" for delaying the changes further.

Nixon prodded lawmakers on the issue in a message Monday.

"This year must be the year in which we raze the ramshackle welfare system patched up so many times in the past but still basically unchanged since it was first enacted as emergency legislation in the mid 1930s," Nixon said.

Nixon's plan includes a controversial family assistance proposal to build a $2,400 floor under the income of every family of four. He first proposed it Aug. 11, 1969.

How to Stop Smoking April 16 at 3:00

On Sunday afternoon, April 16, a group of men and women will arrive - one by one - at the St. Helena Health Center. Most will not know each other. But all will have a common purpose - to stop smoking. Join this group and you will work with our team of experts (physicians, physical therapists and clinical counselors) for five days. You will learn how to overcome the physical addiction to tobacco, how to restore lost breathing capacity, how to cope with the tensions that "cal for a cigarette", and how to keep your weight in line. By Friday, April 21, you should be able to return home free of nicotine and in better health that you've been for a long time. (The fresh mountain air, attractive private rooms and good food make the St. Helena experience a real rest cure.) Send the coupon now for more details, or telephone for the brochure.

If you cannot attend our April 16 session, plan to join us May 7 or May 21.

came armed with a briefcase of notes and documents, was confined to cross-examination by Shaw after Myers introduced as evidence notes Souza had made of closed meetings Feb. 12, 1968, and April 28, 1969.

Backed by the notes he took at the meetings Souza stuck by statements of a week earlier when he said the 1968 closed meeting dealt solely with a letter attacking David J. Sumbardo, then city administrator.

Sumbardo and two former councilmen testified that clerk matron Marsha Kittelman's undercover narcotics work was discussed at the 1968 meeting, but Souza said that was "absolutely not" the case.

One of more than 20 charges against Orr is that he made Mrs. Kittelman a policewoman without authority in 1968, thus exposing the city to damages for false arrest.

Souza said the 1969 closed meeting was called because firemen complained Mrs. Kittelman was leaving the police station unmanned too much.

Following that session, Souza said, "It was clear in my mind that if Mrs. Kittelman was to continue on in helping the undercover narcotics people, it was to be on her own time." Time spent in court was to come from her vacation, he said.

After Orr was fired by City Administrator Robert E. Crowe Sept. 30, Souza was one of three councilmen who voted to uphold the firing, which Orr then appealed to the board of review.

Among charges compiled by Crowe are allegations that Orr showed favoritism to and engaged in improper social relations with Mrs. Kittelman, was drunk in public on several occasions, failed to set up procedures and training, dismissed parking tickets without justification, threatened officers with violence, failed to provide security and failed to report liquor law violations to the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

Shaw was more painstaking in cross-examining Souza than he had been with previous witnesses. At two points he consulted a series of direct quotes from Souza's initial testimony which had been extracted from tapes. He often resorted to asking the same question up to five times.

Myers at one point objected to the tactic, but Shaw countered, "I agree with that. That is the third or fourth time and I haven't got a single answer yet."

At issue was a statement by San Anselmo Inspector Bernard Del Santo that Souza and councilman Lee Nelder told him they were out to fire Orr.

"I am denying that the three of us ever got together in a discussion along those lines," Souza said.

He also disclaimed other attempts by Shaw to show he had been part of a conspiracy to oust Orr.

In the 1970 campaign, he said, "My platform issue one was the social permissiveness that was pervading our city."

Shaw told the board, "I think the testimony will disclose this was one of the bones they (Souza and Nelder) had to pick with the chief."

But Souza said that although rumors flew both in 1968 and 1970 that he was out to fire Orr, each time he told Orr the rumors were myth. "I reassured him as long as he did his job he wouldn't have anything to worry about," Souza said.

Souza also gave testimony on the Pavilion incident in which Orr is accused of having struck a fellow officer during a melee while under the influence of liquor.

"He had an aroma of alcohol on his breath, but I wouldn't say he was drunk," Souza said.

The councilman said he interviewed about a dozen persons at the Pavilion and at least five said the chief was under the influence of alcohol.

None, however, would sign an affidavit for him and the district attorney later cleared Orr with the letter that sparked Myers' outburst.

Souza also stood by testimony that Bella Aaron, head of Marin's police-community relations program, told the council in closed session that Orr "should have psychiatric care" and again said former Mayor George A. Pagni was inaccurate in saying the council unanimously supported Orr after the chief's arrest in 1967 for disturbing the peace at a San Rafael dance hall.

Souza's testimony drew a crowd of about 40 which soon swelled to more than 60, one of the biggest turnouts since the hearings began in November.

The councilman will take the stand again at 7:30 p.m. today at the Fairfax Women's Club.

Pro-Park District Group Seeks Delay

A group supporting creation of an autonomous regional park district requested county officials today to delay consideration of the proposal for two months.

The regional district, supported by People for Parks and Open Space, was scheduled to be considered April 12 by the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission.

However, in a letter filed today, the group said it wanted the proposal continued to June so it can assess advantages of the countywide park district, proposed and supported by county supervisors.

Both proposals are aimed at creating an agency to acquire scenic open space in the eastern section of Marin.

Supervisors last week endorsed the countywide district which would replace the county parks and recreation department and would have a tax rate of 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation. (The parks and recreation department was allocated 12 cents per $100 last year.)

The countywide district, while having a separate tax rate, would be governed by the board of supervisors and would require voter approval.

Carol Staley of Corte Madera, cochairman of the People for Parks group, said the group will seek to have the countywide district board expanded to include two separately elected representatives besides the supervisors.

Also, the group will seek that 80 per cent of the funds collected by the district be earmarked for land acquisition with the remaining 20 per cent for administration and management, she said.

If in two months the group becomes dissatisfied with the county's proposal, she said, it will again propose the autonomous regional district.

and at a "lesser host of persons, who, not to be outdone, appear to have jumped on the bandwagon."

Bennett, whose arrest by the Sausalito police for drunken driving triggered the grand jury inquiry, criticized the panel last week for overlooking reported department practices more serious than arrest quotas.

The association said, "We do not, as a group, intend to lower our professional quality or compromise our integrity as a result of pressure or slanderous insinuations."

JAIL

shotguns swarmed over both buildings. Both were sealed off. Miss Davis and her four attorneys were denied entrance when they first arrived, but later let in.

Then today's session of the trial was called off, while newsmen, spectators, and bystanders collected behind a restraining fence near the entrance to the jail, in case the car the convicts demanded emerged from there.

One of the convicts involved was identified as John Eddie Brown, 26, held for kidnaping and conspiracy.

His brother, Larry Brown, said he went in to talk Brown into surrendering and found he had been recaptured. But he said three other inmates were holding the hostages.

Virtually the entire press corps collected from around the world to cover the Davis trial was covering the jailbreak—including courtroom sketch artists, busily sketching the jail building.

One of the hostages was identified as Sue Kanimoto, a Japanese-American medical secretary. The other was an unidentified deputy.

Sheep-Killer Vigil Continues

Ranchers near Tomales are continuing their all-night alert for a vicious dog that has already killed or crippled 88 sheep.

The dog last attacked on Friday night, and Walter Burbank, owner of one of the three terrorized ranches believes that the dog has probably been tied-up by its owner, unaware of his pet's killer instincts.

Burbank and others believe the killing will resume whenever the dog runs free again.

Driver Treated For Cut Hand

Charles Cannon, 66, of 45 Grove Lane, San Anselmo, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut left hand received in an accident Saturday, according to hospital reports.

Cannon was going east on Fourth Street at 5:20 p.m. when his car hit the rear of a car stopped at Ross Valley Drive, according to police. Earl Stanford Harris, 32, of Santa Rosa was the driver of the other car.

Marin As 'Research Lab' Urged

A Novato resident, seeking to stimulate new ideas on community problems, has proposed establishing a private Marin institute in conjunction with Indian Valley Colleges.

Herbert W. Cook Jr., cochairman of the Novato Citizens' Creek Committee, proposed the institute in a sweeping 15-page proposal submitted to the committee for study.

The proposed institute could offer a course in "community evaluation and management, using all of Marin County as a research laboratory," he said.

The course would "cover all aspects of our community: taxes, land use, schools, planning, growth, youth, senior citizens, medical facilities, police, fire, civic groups, industry or lack of industry, commission, environment, welfare, recreation, parks, transportation, flood control, and estimated community potential and desires," Cook said.

Such an overall analysis would allow the community to establish guidelines and would provide "in essence a factual community manual for citizens, students, prospective employees and candidates for political office, he said.

Communities "can easily, through lack of community management and awareness" lose conrol of their destiny, Cook warned.

The institute could obtain "seed money" from donations and grants and promote new concepts, Cook said.

As money-making projects, he proposed establishing a "Novato Creek Press," as "an objective and analytical literary vehicle" which could provide a "practical and progressive direction for this nation," and a "Marin loose-leaf library" that would carry divergent views on special9issues in a community.

He stressed the problem of supporting community colleges by property taxes and said: "We must make, through the Marin institute, the Indian Valley Colleges a profit-making productive community industry."

Cook also proposed that Marin County be designated a "demonstration project" where a variety of environmental projects could be achieved.

REACTION

Kreins had lured Wright to Sausalito from the Hayward Police Department where Kreins had been chief before moving to Sausalito.

Fraass, 27, has been with the Sausalito police since 1966, served on the Belvedere force before that.

Malkin, 30, joined the Sausalito police in September 1967 after working in Fremont. He was appointed captain in February 1969.

Imlay mentioned the difficulties of trying to fire a policeman brought to light by the battle to fire Police Sgt. Thomas H. Zink. A Marin Superior Court Judge ordered Zink reinstated in January and the city has appealed.

Meanwhile, the city faces millions of dollars in damage suits, charging false arrest.

ULSTER

ful man in the country," he said. "If he can command the following of all these people there is nothing he can't do." He paused.

"And by the look of things there's nothing they won't do for him."

The first day of Craig's two-day protest strike Monday massed a crowd of 20,000 in front of Belfast's city hall. By midnight Protestants clashed with British troops in the towns of Portadown and Lurgan south of Belfast for the first time in nearly one year.

And the violence took two more lives today—two men kiled when a bomb explosion outside a police station in Limavady caught their car as they passed. They were the 289th and 290th to die since violence broke out in August, 1969.

Young men in shirtsleeves, blind to the rain and winds which lashed the marchers, hammered huge drums. Bagpipes shrilled Protestant anthems: "The Sash My Father Wore", honoring Orange Order sashes, and "Derry's Wall," a hymn to the relief by Protestants of a Londonderry besieged by Roman Catholics in 1690.

Throughout the afternoon chants of "We want Craig!" echoed across the beautiful grounds of Stormont Castle, for more than half a century a symbol of Protestant supremacy.

(In London, William Whitelaw, Britain's newly-named Secretary for Northern Ireland, appealed to the Protestant majority in Ulster to help find a solution to its troubles when the present two-day general strike ends.

"One can understand, even if one cannot accept, the feelings that have been given expression in the two-day strike," Whitelaw said. "I hope once that is over, they will settle down and indeed seek with all concerned to find a solution.")

"Our endeavors to provide a just government for Ulster have been betrayed by London," retiring Premier Brian Faulkner told the cheering crowd police said surpassed 100,000. Marchers converged on the buildings in East Belfast by car, bus, bicycle and foot, many marching in step to the boom of Protestant Orange Order drums in defiance of a government ban on parades.

British troops, deployed to prevent any recurrence of Protestant violence against the Roman Catholics they outnumber three to one, lined the five mile route from Belfast center to Stormont Castle grounds.

Lashing rain fell.

"Joining the (Irish) Republic, we reject," Faulkner said. "Independence is such nonsense for Ulster. We will not separate from the United Kingdom because the United Kingdom belongs to us."

A strike by up to 300,000 workers against the suspension of parliament and direct British rule imposed by British Prime Minister Edward Heath brought public services and normal life to a near standstill for the second day.

Deed Accepted For New City Offices

The Rohnert Park City Council accepted the deed for property on Commerce Boulevard for its new city office building in a special session last night.

City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan reported that construction is under way and that the building should be complete before the Aug. 1 deadline. Cotati School District will share office space in the building with the city.

Guilty Plea To Selling Of Heroin

Christopher Austin Fenn, 24, of San Rafael yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of selling heroin. He is to be sentenced May 8.

Fenn was arrested Oct. 7 on a warrant charging that he sold $60 worth of the narcotic to a drug agent on Aug. 3.

officers to perform for the sake of statistics."

The report said officers' reports occasionally were compared to those of others, and that Fraass or the sergeants often graded performances with such written rankings as "good," "O.K.," "low," "needs improvement" or "work on low areas." A sample activity report, containing the rankings, was enclosed to the jury's report.

As reported previously in news stories, the jury said "young officers who produced a high level of activity were praised for 'eager aggressiveness' on their evaluation reports. In addition, officers who did not meet the expectations (even when at times their production was considerable) were informed that if they did not meet them their probationary period would be extended or their pay raises deferred.

"On two occasions an officer was sent out at the end of his shift on his own time until he found and wrote a moving violation."

The jury blamed the production emphasis on a "lack of competent leadership by the chief." The jury said "he refuses to be concerned about the methods his sergeants use to motivate the patrolmen. He says that is 'none of his business' as chief."

The panel termed insufficient the training given new officers, consisting of two weeks under Fraass and four weeks of on the job with a veteran officer. A high turnover rate, blamed by the jury on "poor administration," also was noted, although the panel said departures from the force had stabilized recently.

The jury called upon the Sausalito City Council to "improve the situation" by writing guidelines for common situations in which officers "have to exercise discretion, including decisions on whether or not to arrest or cite in specific situations involving specific crimes." It acknowledged, however, that such guidelines were rare.

New Poland President Named

WARSAW (UPI)—Prof. Henryk Jablonski, 62, was elected president of Poland by parliament today, completing the 15-month-old power takeover by Communist party leader Edward Gierek.

Jablonski replaces 60-year-old Jozef Cyrankiewicz, who has held the posts of Premier, Deputy Premier and President continuously since Feb. 7, 1947.

Jablonski, Minister of Education since 1965 and a member of the Communist Party's 11-man Politburo since December, last year, was the sole candidate for president.

Only Two Filed In Council Race

Friday's deadline for filing to run for a seat on the Marin City Council is approaching and only two persons have filed, acording to Rev. Samuel L. Banks, council chairman. Five of nine seats are open.

"The community is urged to have interested citizens pick up petitions and file them by 5 p.m. Friday," he said.

The two candidates are Mrs. Royce McLamore and Ernest Small, an incumbent.

Election date is April 4, and the only polling place is at the old firehouse in Marin City, according to Banks.

Deadline Delay For Execution

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)— Kidnapers of a Fiat auto executive today extended the deadline for his "execution" a second time and lowered their ransom demands for his release.

The group, members of a Trotskyite organization called The Revolutionary Army of the People, said they would shoot Oberdan Sallustro, director of Fiat in Argentina, at midnight tonight unless the demands were met. Their earlier deadline was at midnight Monday.

OBITUARIES

Long A Marin Resident, S. Scotto Is Dead At 85

Salvatore Scotto, former Marin tavern owner and longtime county resident, died yesterday in a local convalescent home after a short illness. He was 85.

Scotto, who last resided at 214 Mission Avenue, San Rafael, was in the tavern business for about 25 years and at one time owned Travelers Inn in San Rafael.

Born in Italy, he came to the Bay Area in 1913, followed six years later by his wife, Amelia. The couple, married near Naples in 1910, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in 1950.

When Mrs. Scotto arrived in the Bay Area, the couple lived in Novato for a short time, then moved to San Rafael in 1920. Mrs. Scotto died last September.

Scotto was a member of San Rafael Aerie 256 of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Survivors are four sons, Michael and Guido of San Rafael, Hugo of Novato and Vincent of Mill Valley; a daughter, Rosemary Thierfeldt of Marinwood; a brother, Benjamin of Italy; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow at St. Raphael's Church, San Rafael, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. today at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael. The family prefers donations to a favorite charity.

Driver Of Death Car Arraigned

Eric Ansley Van Horn, 21, of Mill Valley, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on felony charges of drunken driving and manslaughter stemming from the death of a 19-year-old youth in an accident Saturday afternoon.

Bail for Van Horn was set at $10,000. He was to return to court Monday to enter pleas to the charges.

Van Horn was the driver of a pickup truck which went over a bank near Panoramic Highway, according to highway patrol officers.

A passenger, Eric Bryant Saterlie, 19, also of Mill Valley was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Phone Company Picket Line Up

Operators continued picketing Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. today in what union officials said was not a strike but was to call attention to discrimination hiring and promotion practices.

Picketing started Friday at the office at 860 Las Gallinas Avenue and was being carried on yesterday and today at the office at 914 Mission Avenue, San Rafael.

"This is strictly a local matter and not the policy of the higher management in the company," said Bernard V. Chiaravalle, president of Communications Workers of America Local 9404.

Santa Rosan Pleads Innocent In Assault

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Larry S. Coffey, 20, of Santa Rosa, has pleaded innocent in Central Sonoma Municipal Court to a rape charge.

Judge Frank Passalacqua set bail at $12,500 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Monday. Coffey was arrested March 22 on suspicion of raping an 18-year-old Sonoma State College coed in an oatfield off East Cotati Avenue near the college.

J.D. ALBERTON

James D. Albertoni, 53, Petaluma milk distributor, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital after a nine-month illness. Albertoni was born in Nicasio and was reared there and in San Rafael.

He was a graduate of San Rafael High School and had operated a milk transportation business for many years.

Albertoni was a member of the Native Sons of the Golden West, Nicasio Parlor 183, Sons of Italy and teamsters Local 624. He lived at 515 Sunnyslope Avenue.

He is survived by his wife, Elsie; a son, Richard Albertoni; a daughter, Linda Albertoni; a brother, Leo Albertoni, all of Petaluma; and two sisters, Mary Barboni of Petaluma and Josephine Fitch of Stockton.

Funeral will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday at St. Vincent DePaul Church, Petaluma. Burial will be at Calvary Cemetery. Recitation of the Rosary will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Sorensen Funeral Home. Contributions may be made to any charity.

O.A. GRONBERG

Funeral for Oscar A. Gronberg, 81, of San Francisco, a former Petaluma resident, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Thursday at Sorensen Funeral Home, Petaluma.

Gronberg died Sunday at a San Francisco hospital after a short illness. He was born and reared in Norway and moved to San Francisco in 1910. Gronberg lived in Petaluma for a short time, but spent most of his life in San Francisco where he owned and operated Geary Street Furniture Store until his retirement eight years ago.

Gronberg was a member of Henrik Ibsen Lodge 7, Sons of Norway.

He is survived by his wife, Maren Chirstine; two sons, Richard and Henry Gronberg of Novato; two brothers, Thorleif Gronberg of Deerfield Park, Fla., and Sigurd Gronberg of Norway; a sister Margit Gronberg of Norway, and four grandchildren.

Burial will be at Cypress Hill Memorial Park. Contributions may be made to the American Heart Fund.

$126,000 Novato Planning Budget Urged In 1972-73

Novato Planning Commissioners last night recommended a $126,510 planning department budget for 1972-73, up $20,300 from the current budget.

Planning director Brian W. Mattson said the proposed budget includes $13,000 for an environmental consultant to assist in preparing an environmental plan and $5,000 in matching funds for a state-required study of geological hazards.

The budget also retains a planning technician, now working under the emergency employment act, and increases a half-time typist-clerk to full-time.

The Novato Planning Commission also:

TENNIS CLUB — Granted the Olive Ridge Tennis Club a use permit to develop tennis courts and a parking area on the portion of its 30-acre site at Olive Avenue and Deer Island Lane, lying within the Novato Creek flood plain.

SUTRO OAKS — Granted Olompali Investment Inc. a variance to prepare a master plan for all but 1.72 acres of a 13.10-acre cite on the east side of Sutro Avenue, opposite Pleasant Valley School, and set consideration of the plan for April 24, with a recommendation that the maximum dwelling units permitted be 43.

PACHECO RANCH — Set April 10 at 8 p.m. to consider prezoning of the 500-acre former Pacheco Ranch, south of Loma Verda, where Perl Mack Enterprises plans to construct about 700 dwellings.

HOUSING — Adjounred until 8 p.m. Monday for a public hearing on the housing element to the general plan at the Novato community house.

Burglary Case Jail Sentence

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court yesterday placed Thomas Eric Grayson, 21, of San Rafael, on probation for three years and ordered him to jail for 60 days for a burglary conviction.

Grayson had earlier admitted burglarizing a residence on Woods Street in San Rafael on Nov. 24.

Another man arrested with him, Robert Louis Arnett II, 22, also of San Rafael, is currently serving a 10-month jail sentence.

Judge Gardiner yesterday also ordered Grayson to work one day a week for the county parks and recreation department for three months after he is released from jail.

Panthers Ask Coverage Of New Program

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—The Black Panther party has invited the "established press" to take a first hand look at its new policy of putting down the gun to work within the system.

The Panthars said Monday that "all representatives of the mass media," were welcome to attend the Black Community Survival Conference beginning Wednesday at the Oakland Auditorium.

During the three day event, the Panthers said they would give away 10,000 bags of groceries, give free sickle cell anemia tests and register 10,000 persons to vote.

An invitation to newsmen was free of some of the abusive rhetoric that have often marked Panther statements in the past.

Prison Inmate Is Still Missing

A convicted murderer was still at large this morning following a walkaway late Sunday night from San Quentin's honor farm, according to prison Information Officer Joseph R. O'Brien.

Salvatore Natavidad, 27, from Alameda County, was last seen at 10:30 p.m. Sunday and apparently walked away between that time and the 12:15 a.m. check, O'Brien said.

Natavidad began serving a five-year-to-life sentence for second degree murder in May 1970 and was due for parole consideration in July.

Kentfield Board Discusses Proposed Budget's Implications

Preparing to tackle the 1972-73 budget next month, the Kentfield School District board last night discussed some of the implications and assumptions of the proposed budget of $1,602,000.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said he told the board that the figure, which includes a reserve of $130,000 carried over from this year, will mean a tax rate of $3.10 per $100 assessed valuation if assessed valuation increased 3 per cent and no raise is given. This year's rate is $3.11.

The current budget is $1,638,000, which also includes a reserve of $130,000.

He said each 1 per cent of salary increase will raise the tax rate by two cents.

The Kentfield School District board also:

SUMMER SCHOOL — Authorized $2,000 for use by the summer school run by the parent-teacher association if it spends over its income. Bacich said the association usually needs $600 to $1,000, but may need more this year.

ART FESTIVAL — Gave $300 to the Kentfield School District Art Festival, an exhibition of children's art scheduled for May 21.

LANDSCAPE — Ended a contract with Forster and Kroeger landscape maintenance of Corte Madera, which had kept up the district's grounds for the past 10 years. Bacich said the California State Employees Association pressured the board to drop the firm in favor of district employees.

HEARING BUILDING — Accepted the $18,117 bid of Piombo General Engineering Contractors of San Rafael to build a facility for children with hearing difficulties at Adaline E. Kent School. The state and county will pay for the work, Bacich said.

DENTAL CARE — Discussed dropping the California Dental Service, which recently raised its rates drastically, in favor of AID, a dental plan of the General American Insurance Co. The switch would cut the district bill from $9,200 a year to $8,300, Bacich said.

MEETING DATES — Adjourned to a workshop Tuesday to discuss a proposed policy handbook which will be followed by a second workshop April 5 to discuss staffing improvements with the teachers of Wolfe Grade School and by the regular meeting April 10 when the budget will be discussed. All three meetings begin at 8 p.m. at Wolfe Grade.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

7:56 a.m., San Anselmo — Fire caused $15,500 damage to upper floor of house and contents at 8 Rosemont Avenue; cause under investigation; house owned by P. Bellunmin of San Francisco and rented by Michael Smalley.

11:44 a.m., Marinwood — False alarm at Dixie School.

1:25 p.m., Larkspur — Grass fire at Dougherty Drive and Riviera Circle; cause unknown; burned 100 square feet.

3:10 p.m., Novato — Car fire on Highway 101 at Diablo Avenue, caused by backfire through carburetor; damage estimated at $250 to car owned by Milton I. Moyne of San Francisco.

3:22 p.m., Larkspur — Car fire at 121 Hawthorne Drive, caused by short circuit in wiring in car belonging to Spencer R. Kennedy of 540 E Street, San Rafael; out on arrival of department.

5:05 p.m., Marin City — Fire in locker room at 409 Drake Avenue; cause unknown, no damage; Marin County Fire Department responded.

8:38 p.m., Marinwood — False alarm at Miller Creek School.

Car Theft Guilt Plea Withdrawn

Kenneth Harvey Hicks, 39-year-old state prison parolee from San Francisco, yesterday was allowed in Marin Superior Court to withdraw his earlier plea of guilty to a car theft charge.

After he pleaded innocent, a jury trial was set for the week of April 10.

Hicks was stopped on Highway 101 last November by a highway patrolman who said the car Hicks was driving was weaving.

Not only did the car turn out to be stolen, it contained paintings Hicks had done during seven years of prison life.

Hicks, who has an eight-page arrest record, reportedly was living in a halfway house for former inmates in San Francisco.

Two Youths Held On Burglary

Two San Rafael youths were arrested today in connection with a house burglary last night.

Richard A. Kisling, 16, of 325 Ironstone Court and Michael D. Mitchell, 18, of 1512 Lincoln Avenue were arrested on suspicion of burglary and possession of stolen property.

They were arrested at 3 a.m. on Lincoln Avenue, according to police, carrying erotic magazines and paperback books. The literature was later identified by Robert J. Gaughan, of 1011 Second Street, San Rafael, as property stolen from his apartment.

Gaughan had reported to police that between 7:30 and 8 p.m. yesterday his apartment had been burgled of approximately $800 in camera equipment.

Kisling was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall while Mitchell was held in Marin County Jail pending a bail hearing this afternoon.

Concern On Growth Of Tidelands

The Mill Valley Planning Commission last night recommended to the city council that it adopt an ordinance controlling development on tidelands within the city.

The commission called for an ordinance similar to regulations imposed by the bay conservation and development commission, according to Planning Director Tom W. Newton.

The commission also recommended that a portion of the city's sign ordinance be amended to clarify regulations governing how many and what size signs can be on a corner building.

At present, said Newton, the ordinance is unclear about whether the owner of such a building can take the square-footage of signs permitted for each face of the building and combine them into one sign, or whether he must have two.

The planning commission also acted on several zoning variance requests.

It approved a conditional use permit to convert a residence at 239 Miller Avenue to a combination medical and professional office building.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Kelly Miles, 19-year-old daughter of actress Vera Miles, will make her motion picture debut playing an airline stewardess in "Airborne" at MGM.

Nixon Confers With Hussein On Proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) —King Hussein of Jordan conferred with President Nixon today on his controversial plan to establish a federated kingdom on the east and west banks of the Jordan River.

Hussein arrived in Washington Monday night under heavy security.

The 36-year-old monarch and Nixon met at 11 a.m. in the President's Oval Office. They sat on highbacked gold upholstered chairs before a crackling fire as photographers were permitted into the office for a few minutes of picture taking.

Nixon conferred with Hussein for 90 minutes. The President's national security affairs adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, was present. There was no report on the talks.

Afterwards, Hussein had lunch with Secretary of State William P. Rogers at the State Department.

The White House described Hussein's presence in the United States as a "private visit." It was the fifth time Hussein has been in this country since the Israeli-Arab war in June 1967 and the third time Hussein has met with Nixon in the White House.

They were to meet again at a black tie "working dinner" at the White House hosted by Nixon.

Hussein has proposed a semi-autonomous Palestinian state on the east bank of the Jordan after Israel relinquishes the occupied land. His plan has been rejected by Palestinian guerrilla groups, most of the Arab nations and by Israel.

The White House said Monday that Hussein's plan is "an internal matter."

Hussein was expected to undergo a physical checkup at Walter Reed Army Medical Center later this week. He is suffering from a heart ailment.

Nixon Attacks Congress On Welfare Reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Noting Congress has failed to act on the welfare reform plan he proposed 31 months ago, President Nixon has said there can be "absolutely no excuse" for delaying the changes further.

Nixon prodded lawmakers on the issue in a message Monday.

"This year must be the year in which we raze the ramshackle welfare system patched up so many times in the past but still basically unchanged since it was first enacted as emergency legislation in the mid 1930s," Nixon said.

Nixon's plan includes a controversial family assistance proposal to build a $2,400 floor under the income of every family of four. He first proposed it Aug. 11, 1969.

Larkspur Plan Body To Meet

The Larkspur Planning Commission will hold its first public hearing on proposed development policies and rules governing study districts at its regular meeting at 8 p.m. today at city hall.

The policies were prepared by consultants Mocine and Williams of San Francisco to reflect the priorities of residents who attended development policy conferences.

The study zone proposal would permit the city to place any property facing an unusual change in suspension until the area is restudied.

Also to be discussed are recommendations to the city council on the Preliminary Marin Countywide Plan.

Bagley To Talk On Housing Bills

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, will speak at a luncheon to be held on April 7 by the Committee for Adequate Shelter for All at the old train depot, 930 Tamalpais Avenue, San Rafael.

Bagley will discuss pending state legislation, including his bill to provide state financing aid to low and moderate-income housing.

Advance reservations are being handled by the Marin Senior Coordinating Council at the depot.

How to Stop Smoking April 16 at 3:00

On Sunday afternoon, April 16, a group of men and women will arrive - one by one - at the St. Helena Health Center. Most will not know each other. But all will have a common purpose - to stop smoking. Join this group and you will work with our team of experts (physicians, physical therapists and clinical counselors) for five days. You will learn how to overcome the physical addiction to tobacco, how to restore lost breathing capacity, how to cope with the tensions that "cal for a cigarette", and how to keep your weight in line. By Friday, April 21, you should be able to return home free of nicotine and in better health that you've been for a long time. (The fresh mountain air, attractive private rooms and good food make the St. Helena experience a real rest cure.) Send the coupon now for more details, or telephone for the brochure.

If you cannot attend our April 16 session, plan to join us May 7 or May 21.

Coin Collector's Idea Enriches Bay Area

San Franciso's Old Mint will go back into Treasury Department use — as a mint and coin museum and a service center for the Treasury's coin services.

When President Nixon last week ordered this use — thus ending long dispute over what to do with the historic building at Fifth and Mission streets — reports of the announcement made no mention of the genesis of the idea. But it is a story that deserves recounting. And it has a point.

THE MINT will become a Treasury museum because of the idea of a coin collector.

In 1969, when the controversy over what to do with the Old Mint was at its height, Gordon Hunt of San Diego, who collects coins as a hobby, proposed that it be made a western branch of the Smithsonian Institution. This, he held, would both provide Pacific Coast residents with better opportunity to see some of the treasures of that federal museum and preserve the building itself as a historic shrine.

The California Numismatic Society, made up of coin collectors, endorsed the idea. So did the American Numismatic Society, the Canadian Numismatic Society, and the American Banknote Society — all collector groups.

AT THAT TIME, a committee headed by Robert W. Finch, who was then secretary of health, education and welfare, was studying various proposals for the Old Mint and its site.

The numismatic groups urged the museum idea on Finch's committee, and on senators and congressmen. Among the materials they sent the officials were copies of an Independent-Journal editorial of Setp. 24, 1969, endorsing the proposal, which had been brought to our attention by Angelo Turrin; a San Rafael coin collector.

Early in 1970, Finch's committee approved the proposal, subject to approval of directors of the Smithsonian Institution. But the Smithsonian directors turned it down, holding that to put a Smithsonian branch in California would bring a rash of requests for branches elsewhere and fragment the valuable collection in Washington.

THAT LOOKED like the end of the coin collector's idea. But last week's announcement proved otherwise.

While the Old Mint will not become a Smithsonian branch, it will become a historical museum — and, most fittingly, a museum of the history of coinage and currency in the United States. It will also provide a service for coin collectors, from whose idea the museum use came.

The story proves that a good idea is hard to down. It proves also that those in the federal government, although they often seem so remote from most of us, can be reached with a proposal that is well presented and makes sense.

Because a coin collector in San Diego had a good idea, and his fellow collectors pushed it, the Bay Area will be the richer for a historic shrine put to appropriate use. We're rather proud of the I-J's small part in bringing this about.

Death Penalty Initiative Leaves Legislative Control

By EARL G. WATERS

In seeking to reverse the State Supreme Court's decision on the death penalty, a formidable campaign is being launched to place the issue on the November ballot.

Petitions are being circulated to collect the more than 500,000 names necessary to do this. It is not thought the petition circulators will meet much resistance in finding signers, but the physical magnitude of the job, which must be completed within about 60 days, is gigantic.

The language of the initiative, drafted by Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger, was the combined thinking of the governor, district attorneys, peace and correctional officers, and Younger.

It provides that all laws relating to the death penalty which were in effect prior to the Supreme Court decision are restored and shall not be deemed unconstitutional. By submitting this to the electorate the proponents seek to place the question beyond the power of the supreme Court to rule.

But in restoring the death penalty laws to their prior status before the fateful Supreme Court ruling, the proponents have provided the authority to repeal the death penalty for any and all crimes will remain with the Legislatures.

THIS IS A GREAT disappointment to many who had hoped for an initiative which would relieve the Legislature, as well as the courts, from further jurisdiction on the question.

Included among those who believed the people should settle the question once and for all were many legislators. They have grown sick of debating the issue at each session for more than 30 years.

Under the proposed initiative the Legislature could turn right around after the November election and repeal, by its own authority, all death penalty laws.

Younger said this is consistent with the contentions which have been made to the courts with the assertions that the issue is properly one to be decided by the Legislature. It was the consensus of the drafters that the initiative, in the form leaving the authority with the Legislature, would be more marketable than the flat adoption by the people of the death penalty. He also pointed out that, at a later date, it might be desirable to remove the death penalty from certain crimes or to add other crimes to those now punishable by death.

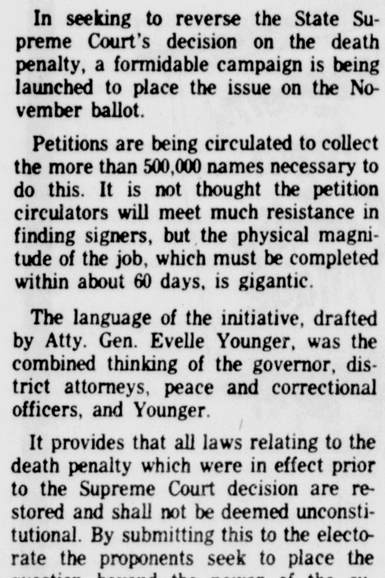

He said legal technical problems were too complicated to provide outright the death penalty in the initiative. He expressed the belief that no Legislature in the forseeable future would repeal the death penalty in the face of a majority vote in favor of it by the people.

THE DRAFTING PROBLEMS to permit the people to mandate the death penalty for murder would not seem monumental. And Younger has more confidence in the actions of future Legislatures than many others. But undeniably his position is right that all crimes now subject to the death penalty should not be so tightly nailed down. Flexibility to change those crimes and the definition of them should be with the Legislation.

As for placing the issue beyond the Legilature so as to relieve it of the annual hassle, even a flat declaration in the initiative would not have achieved this. Members could still propose constitutional amendments. The difference would have been that it takes a two-thirds vote of each house and a vote of the people to amend the constitution, whereas laws can be changed by simple majority vote of both houses.

In the final analysis, passage of the initiative will restore the death penalty for all crimes heretofore provided before the Supreme Court meddled with it — subject to future action by the Legislature. Those who favor this should vigorously support its passage.

Water Supply 'Solution' Offered

Much has been said and written about the Marin County water supply. The establishment attempted to put over a $45 million bond issue in the election last fall. The voters turned it down, and Ibelieve rightly so.

Here is a plan that should be workable, and at a more realistic cost to the already overburdened tax payers:

The water could be brought from the Russian River via a pipeline, the intake point would be in the form of a concrete sump placed at a proper point in the bed of the river. The sump would be protected by a suitable screen. During the natural winter run-off of water in the Russian River, the pipeline would be activated. The water would be pumped through this pipe line and discharged into the Nicasio Dam. There could be a suitable silt catching sump located at a proper place between the Russian River and the Dam. Such a system would assure a full calpacity of water in the dam at the end of the rainy season. This, in turn, would remove any possible water shortage for Marin water users for the foreseeable future.

Certainly, the taxpayers would wholeheartedly back the construction of such a pipe line, provided the cost would be kept within reason. What do other readers think of the idea?

Can't Buy Eggs Without A Guide

On 23 March the Postal Service delivered to patrons of the Sixth Congressional District a brochure forwarded by Congressman William S. Mailliard. The brochure contains a listing of Department of Agriculture publications available for distribution by members of Congress to their constituents.

One can only imagine the amount of taxpayers' money which goes into the preparation, publication, and distribution of such enlightening documents as "How To Buy Eggs," "How To Buy Cheddar Cheese," "How To Buy Canned and Frozen Vegetables," "How To Buy Beans, Peas and Lentile," "Growing Pansies," etc., etc., etc.

I do not know how members of Congress buy eggs, cheese, canned vegetables, etc., but if they need a government publication to guide them in their purchases, something about their abilities to represent us is suspect! For years, I have been buying eggs by the dozen, in paper or plastic cartons, from the local supermarkets or dairies. Moreover, I have accomplished this task on my own, and have even bought cheese and canned and frozen vegetables, without the guidance of a costly government publication.

At a time when most of us are concerned, and rightfully so, over the ever-spreading costs of government with the resultant continual increase in our taxes, I regret that Congressman Mailliard saw fit to add to our costs by the distribution of his brochure, which in turn invites additional costs associated with the handling and mailing of the listed publications. . .

Rural Subdivisions Load On Taxpayers

F. D. Begg begs the queston (letter in March 23 I-J).

He criticizes me for supporting low-density zoning in rural Marin. But he ignores some fiscal reasons for opposing high-density zoning.

(1) Big profits. Some rural landholders want to sell to developers. Both parties will make a lot of money — at my expense. Rural subdivisions don't pay their way. The rest of us taxpayers will have to help pay for their community services.

(2) Speculation. Tax delinquency runs to 11 per cent in parts of West Marin. The county average is three per cent. The 11 per cent is due mainly to speculators who don't pay their taxes on land they are holding for development. I'm subsidizing these lads.

The Williamson Act gives tax relief to Marin ranchers who keep their land in agribusiness. My taxes support this relief. I'll gladly pay more to preserve West Marin.

Questions For Foes Of Death Penalty

I have read the article titled "Duffy Backs High Court Death Rule" which was printed in your newspaper on 26 Feb. I desire to comment on the statements made by Mr. Duffy.

With regard to the opinions expressed by Mr. Duffy and seconded by Mr. Wilson, I would like to ask Mr. Duffy a few questions. When did Mr. Duffy decide that he was opposed to the death penalty? Did Mr. Duffy decide that executions were "very gruesome" before he was appointed warden, after he was appointed warden, or after he was appointed to the Adult Authority? If Mr. Duffy had the feelings of revulsion at any of the aforementioned times, why did he accept any of the appointments? He well knew from his earliest days that inmates were executed at San Quentin. . .

Mr. Wilson could well ponder some of the same questions uestions and provide some answers.

End Of Cold War Teeters On German Party Conflict

WASHINGTON — Democracy is the worst possible form of government except all the others, Winston Churchill once said. In Germany, where Democracy is a new and rather tender plant, a test is just ahead so momentous that the consequences can hardly be exaggerated.

The treaties with the East, designed to ease tension with Moscow and Warsaw, will be before the parliament for ratification next month. Long and painstaking negotiation by Chancellor Willy Brandt and the able younger men around him was aimed at breaking the stalemate out of the cold war. It was a recognition that the prewar past and the territories lost when the Nazi armies were defeated could never be restored.

TODAY THEREIS a real threat that the treaties will be rejected as the slender majority of the coalition of Social-Democrats and Free Democrats is chipped away. Linked to ratification is the agreement between East andest Germany giving Berliners a status they have never had before. The whole structure, put together with so much patient persistence, could come crashing down.

One casualty in the general ruin might be the strategic arms limitation agreement on which the Nixon administration has put such a high stake. The present masters of the Kremlin, Leonid Brazhenev and Alexei Kosygin, are identified with the treaties and the thaw between East and West. It is a safe assumption that they have hard-line opponents who, if their policy should fail, would be ready to move in.

The reaction in the United States would be sharp. While the demand for cutting back the 250,000 American troops in Germany has subsided, with the hope of mutual agreed reduction by the two sides, it would be given a new force with proof that the Germans were bent on keeping alive the old hatreds and the old drive to restore the past.

AMERICANS SIMPLY will not underwrite a new cold war to gratify German ambitions. It is little more than 25 years since the smoke stopped rising from the gas ovens at Auschwitz and Belsen. The memory of that prolonged horror has not been wiped out.

This is something the Christian Democrats, bent on bringing down the Brandt government in a good old lustful power struggle, apparently fail to realize. Cutting back American troop strength as one way to relieve the pressure on the dollar would look very attractive.

The process of ratification is complicated. In the first instance the lower house, the Bundestag, can ratify with a simple majority. But then if the upper house, the Bundesrat, voted in the negative, the treaties must receive in the Budestag an outright majority of 249.

That would mean for the Brandt government squeaking by with a one-vote margin. As the chipping process continues and something like panic seizes the Free Democrat partners in the coalition, this is teetering on the abyss.

BRANDT'S POSITION is complicated by the rise in inflation and the threat of unemployment. Voters complain that many of the promises he made in the election campaign in 1969 for internal reforms have not been carried out. This has been due to circumstances largely beyond the chancellor's control.

Should the treaties be rejected, Brandt would dissolve the parliament on a vote of no confidence and elections would be held in 60 days. The Social Democrats might get a majority, according to present indicators. The damage, however, would have been done, with all those hopeful of restoring the past happy to see the door slammed.

For the whole world the signal would be loud and clear — the Germans on the march again, as so often before with such terrible consequences for humanity.

Vietnam Evaders' Amnesty Issue Divides Americans—Like The War

The amnesty issue is likely to create deep division among Americans for a long time to come because it raises a question which simply cannot be answered by any single, sweeping generalization.

The question is:

Did 70,000 young men go into exile in Canada or Sweden rather than fight in Vietnam because they anticipated a moral judgment later reached by millions of other Americans —namely, that th Vietnam War was unjustifiable?

Or did these young men dodge the draft or desert from the armed forces to save their own skins, while letting other members of their age group bear the sacrifices of an unpopular war?

TO THOSE WHO HOLD the firstviewpoint, the expatriates are "war resisters" who should be welcomed home. Quite a few Americans hold this view and are articulate in expressing it. One of them is Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who presided earlier this month over Senate hearings on proposed amnesty legislation.

To those who hold the latter viewpoint, the expatriates deserve punishment for finking out on a male citizen's duty to bear arms for his country in wartime, whether or not he personally approves of the war. The law provides prison terms of up to five years for draft evasion or desertion.

Related to the second view, but somewhat more compassionate, is the attitude reflected in legislation sponsored by Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio. This would extend amnesty to draftresisters only if they were willing to put in three years of alternative civilian service (such as Peace Corps) after their return home. Deserters would not be eligible for that choice because the armed forces contend that what's left of military discipline would fall apart if deserters went unpunished.

BACKERS OF UNCONDITIONAL amnesty argue that the United States historically has granted amnesty to deserters and draft evaders at the conclusion of the wars in which they refused to fight. Critics retort that previous amnesties came after the wars were over, whereas the current amnesty legislation is being proposed while young Americans still are being wounded or killed in Vietnam.

Still another issue is the effect amnesty would have on the deep gap that has opened up in American society as a result of war.

Amnesty supporters contend it would be a big step forward toward softening polarization caused by the war. Opponents say it would deepen division by outraging those who went ahead, however reluctantly, to accept Army service as their duty.

And of course, offense might be taken not only by Vietnam veterans themselves but also by their parents, wives, sweethearts, uncles, aunts, neighbors and friends, and by relations of young men killed or maimed there.

PRESIDENT NIXON has power to grant amnesty without special legislation and has said he will be "very liberal" about it once all Americans are out of Vietnam and all U.S. prisoners of war have been released. But even then, he said recently, "it would have to be on a basis of their paying the price that anyone should pay for violating the law." That presumably was a reference to Taft's idea of "alternative service" as the price of amnesty.

Just One More Sacrifice To Beat Inflation: Starve

WASHINGTON — There was more good news on the cost of living from the Nixon administration last week. It went up again. But Herbert Stein, one of the President's chief economists, said the only reason it had risen was because food prices had increased. If you eliminated food prices from the cost of living, he said, you would in fact have seen a decrease in the prices.

Not many people realized how well the President's anti-inflation policies were working until they were explained to them by Mr. Stein.

Since food prices seem to be the main problem, I can now reveal what the administration is going to do about it.

DO NOT BE surprised if you flip on your TV set in a few weeks and see the President of the United States sitting at his desk behind his seal.

"My fellow Americans,

"I have asked to speak to you tonight on a subject that is vital to everyone in this country. When I took office three and a half years ago, this country was on the road to inflation; an inflation that touched every household, every man, woman and child in this great land of ours. I vowed at the time to do something about it and I am happy to report to you tonight that my efforts have succeeded. I can now tell you that the price of baseball cards is down .8 of one per cent, the cost of trolley-car tracks has been reduced .9 of one per cent, men's straw hats are selling at one-third the price of 10 years ago.

"Lawrence Welk records have been reduced $1, and men's Nehru jackets are selling at a 50 per cent discount.

"The reason for the success of my anti-inflation program is the willingness of the American people to make sacrifices to stem the tide.

"The only area we don't seem to have made any headway in our fight against rising prices is in food. Now I know you are going to say, "If the price of food goes up how can we ever hope to hold down inflation?'

"MY FELLOW AMERICANS, the answer to that question rests with each and every one of you out there. Ladies and gentlemen, we can lick the problem of the high cost of food if we make one more slight sacrifice. I am asking every person in the nation regardless of race, regardless of age, regardless of party affiliation, to stop eating.

"When I say stop eating, I don't mean just meat or vegetables or fruit or bread. I mean stop eating anything.

"If everyone gives up three meals a day as long as Phase 2 is in effect, I assure you that our battle against higher prices will be won before the November election.

"Some of you may say, 'How can we give up eating when it has become such an important part of our lives?' At first it won't be easy. If I may add a personal note, Pat said to me just before the broadcast, 'Isn't there any other way of lowering the cost of living besides giving up food?'

"And I replied, 'Pat, of course there are other ways. We could freeze farm prices, or put a ceiling on grocery distributors, or issue regulations barring rises in commodities. That would be the easy way, the political way, the economical way.

"BUT, AS PRESIDENT of the United States, I must choose the hard way. Certainly there will be some temporary inconveniences when people have to give up eating. But they are nothing comparable to the gains that will show up on our economic indicators.'

"My fellow Americans, when you go to bed hungry tonight, remember you are not going to bed hungry because there is no food to eat, but you are going to bed hungry because you believe, as I do, in a healthy, stable economy.

"I don't think I'm exaggerating when I say that if every American gives up eating until the inflation crisis is over, this could go down as the week that changed the history of the world."

Snack Bar Entered

The snack bar at Terra Linda High School was broken into yesterday, according to police, but it was not known if anything had been stolen. Entry was made through a window on the east side of the snack bar between 6 and 10:19 p.m.

Park Strollers Now Can Sit

PARIS (UPI)—While Parisian park-goers still are forbidden to walk on the grass, play ball, walk a dog, or make noise, they have just been granted a major concession —the right to be seated without paying for a chair.

For more than 100 years women from a private concession which cared for the yellow metal chairs have demanded "40 centimes (18 cents), Monsieur" of Parisians and tourists alike for the privilege of being seated.

Today, Jean Verdier, the prefect of Paris, announced the chair concession firm had gone bankrupt and that henceforth no fee will be charged for using the chairs.

Rear-End Collision; Hub Woman Injured

A San Anselmo woman was treated for a sprained back at Marin General Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman, following a collision Sunday on highway 101 near Alexander Avenue.

Argentina Nannini, 75, of 26 Meadowcroft Drive, Apt. 2, was a passenger in a car driven by Ottavio Nannini, 77, of the same address. Their car collided with one driven by Howard W. Dodd, 30, of San Francisco at about 2 p.m., according to the California Highway Patrol.

Britain Gearing For An Oil Boom

By JOHN ALLAN MAY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LONDON — Fifty-five million Britons are just beginning to realize what it may mean to be oil millionaires.

So rich in oil are the seabeds around the British Isles now believed to be that, the government has announced, 66 groups are to compete in drilling wells off the coasts of Scotland, Wales and England.

By 1980, says Minister For Industry Sir John Eden, Great Britain very probably will be producing 75 per cent of its total oil needs.

Sir David Barran, chief executive of Shell, estimates that total onshore and offshore oil investments in Britain then will exceed 2,500 million pounds ($6,250,000 million).

On the basis of current prices it is reckoned that British oil is going to save this country about 600 pounds a year in foreign exchange.

The impact on foreign policy could be equally dramatic, although with no wells yet actually drilled in the new areas of exploration, discussion of diplomacy is even more speculative than talk of economics.

Western Europe's heavy dependence on Mideast oil would, of course, be greatly reduced.

However, diplomats here think the consequences of this are more likely to be seen in the gradual further integration of oil-rich Arabia and Northern Africa into the world economy in fresh divisions.

Oil has always been a world business and in future will be that more obviously. Japan's are the busiest tankers now loading in the Mideast. Britain has a stake in Alaska. The United States, oil-rich itself, has enormous interests in the Middle East, the Pacific and Asia.

Opening up of these rich North Sea, North Atlantic, and Irish Sea fields is bound also to have profound effects on Western Europe as a unit.

A united Europe will have its own large scale sources of energy — as important to it now perhaps as was the original exploitation of the coal deposits of Britain and the Ruhr during the industrial revolution — for along with oil and natural gas Europe is proceeding quite fast with the production of nuclear power.

Derek Ezra, head of Britain's National Coal Board, now urges development of a new comprehensive energy policy, both for Britain and Europe. And this is bound to come.

The position of coal in Britain will be radically altered. In the past taxes on oil have kept its price high, partly to subsidize the native coal industry. This may seem less rational in the fulure.

Whereas 73 per cent of Britain's electrical power is derived from coal today, in the future — say in 10 years — the mix will more likely be 15 per cent nuclear, 40 per cent oil, and only 45 per cent coal.

This would allow the coal board to run down its uneconomic pits even faster than previously expected. That will increase the relative efficiency of the coal industry that remains. And that in turn will help keep Britain's remaining miners among the most highly paid men in the kingdom.

Oil will not only reduce the danger of another national coal strike, it may indirectly remove that danger.

The National Coal Board itself is one of the participants in the great oil rush that now is about to take place.

Up to 400 wells will be sunk — it took 200 to establish oil and gas in commercial quantities in the North Sea. North Sea gas now fulfills 90 per cent of all Britain's gas needs.

About 500 companies all told already have a financial interest in the new oil rush, including many banks and insurance and investment companies.

New life will be brought back to old shipyards as the need for rigs increases. This could be of particular importance to Scotland and South Wales.

The main exploration areas are off the Shetland Islands and in the seas between Wales, Southwest, England, and Ireland.

Shell, for instance, has won licenses for some of the northernmost blocks off the western tip of the Shetlands and also the southwesternmost, 75 miles due west of the Isles of Scilly.

These are, however, some of the roughest waters in the world and their successful exploitation assumes spectacular progress in what might be called "rig technology."

But oilmen seem to have no doubt the necessary progress will be made. "If there's oil there, we'll get it up," one of them declared with complete confidence.

Five hundred hard-headed company financial directors are convinced the oil is there, in billions and billions of barrels full.

WASTE KING UNIVERSAL gives you the 3 dishwasher features women want most!

Waste King Universal surveyed the qualities women asked for in an automatic dishwasher, then built a full line of models that measured up to the demands in every way.

Women look for . . .

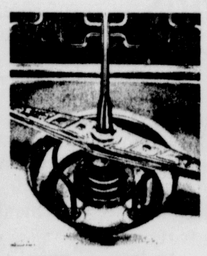

1. SPOTLESS, THOROUGH WASHING AND DRYING
2. BIG CAPACITY AND EASY, RANDOM LOADING
3. DURABILITY AND EASE OF OPERATION

Every Waste King Universal dishwasher meets these needs . . . and offers you the bonus of stainless steel.

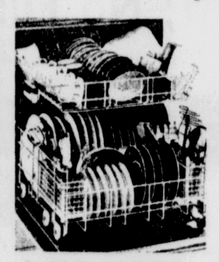

Why Waste King Universal is 4 ways better

EXCLUSIVE H-ARM WASHING ACTION
Like 2 dishwashers in 1. Water jets through separate full-width arms, rotating in opposite directions under each basket. Scour power scrubs away every bit of surface soil.

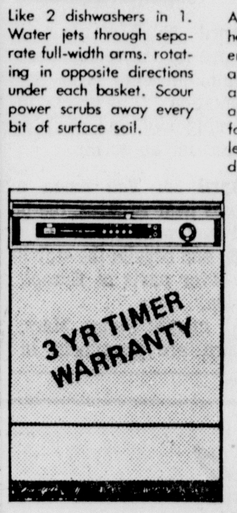

SAFE, SANITARY DRYING
A patented thermomatic heater senses the difference between the heating and cooling effects of air and water, controls heat accordingly. A vital safety factor. Provides safe, silent, sanitary heating and drying.

RUGGED BASKETS, RANDOM LOADING
Slight differences between models, with a lot in common. Enormous capacity. "M" shaped stemware supports, knuckled plate holders, separating curlicues that provide loads of space and protection.

20 YEAR STAINLESS STEEL GUARANTEE
Our tanks, water distribution arms, inner doors, etc. are stainless steel. All stainless steel parts are guaranteed against failure due to corrosion for 20 years.

MODEL SS/910
Push button control gives you a choice of 4 washing cycles, including a cookware soak cycle that eliminates tedious hand-scouring.

MODEL SS/750
Push button control gives you a choice of the 2 most wanted cycles - FULL CYCLE for complete loads, RINSE & HOLD for light, in-between loads.

The Hush Disposer
MODEL 6800
WASTE KING UNIVERSAL

• Exclusive Hush Cushion suspension, Hush Connector • Jam-free hardened stainless steel swivel impellers • Stainless steel turntable • Tool steel grind ring • Waste size control slots • Surgical steel undercutter • Epoxy corrosion protection.

Every Day Is Oil Spill Day

By PETER C. STUART
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sometime and somewhere today (if the day is average) three ships will spill polluting amounts of oil into American waters.

Tomorrow could be worse. Tankers steadily haul more oil, and in larger packages — supertankers that combine more potential spillage with less maneuverability.

Yet the American public may be poorly equipped to save its oil-imperiled coastal waters, critics say.

In an era of 300,000 supertankers and sophisticated radar, critics increasingly charge that government traffic controls still rely too heavily on fog horns, lights, and other rudimentary "rules of the road."

Critics also say that ship radar isn't always operated when it should be and that radar simply isn't always reliable (it can't register many nonmetallic objects, for instance).

Observers as diverse as President Nixon, waterfowl watchers, and the U.S. Coast Guard agreed on a need for more up-to-date protections. But Congress has not acted for six years — until, perhaps, now.

The Senate is expected, in a matter of days, to enact legislation helping public antipollution efforts catch up with the problem that is spreading like an oil slick across the nation's navigable waters.

The House of Representatives already has passed a similar (although milder) bill.

Both the petroleum and shipping industries have long publicly sought better federal communications and traffic systems in crowded domestic waters. The American Institute of Marine Shipping, representing over 60 per cent of the nation's commercial merchant marine, finds "no major disagreement" with the legislation.

"We have the technology," Herbert F. DeSimone, assistant secretary of transportation for environmental and urban affairs, told a Senate committee. "What is needed now is the authority to implement that technology."

The new technology could equip growingly congested ports and waterways with better safety controls — ranging from simple traffic separation patterns to complex sea lanes, surveillance devices, and central control centers. The Coast Guard could even restrict or close an accident plagued port.

The legislation also would sharpen the now fuzzy enforcement powers of the nation's "nautical traffic cop," the Coast Guard. "At present enforcement authority is limited," says Adm. Chester R. Bender, Coast Guard commandant.

The long delayed congressional action (legislation has been pending for six years) comes none too soon:

Since the problem first burst upon the public with the breakup of the tanker Torrey Canyon off England in 1967, the number of polluting spills reported from ships in American waters has more than tripled — from 347 in 1968 (less than one a day) to 1,217 in 1070 (over three a day).

Spills from all sources (of which vessels are the largest) swelled from 714 to 3,711, aided by new federal reporting procedures in late 1970.

The world's fleet of oil tankers also grows, in number and ship size. The National Audubon Society last year chronicled the growth:

	Tankers	Capacity
	Fleet
1959	3,276	62.7 million tons
1969	3,893	146 million tons
	On order
1959	523	19.7 million tons
1969	570	59.3 million tons

Some 133 supertankers of 200,000 to 327,000 tons (regular tankers average 47,000 tons) now ply the world's waters, according to the Natural Resources Defense Council. By 1980, predicts Petroleum Today magazine, tankers may balloon to one million tons.

Recently discovered petroleum reserves may pose new spillage threats to both American coasts.

Tankers shipping oil to West Coast ports from the southern end of the Alaskan pipeline — which the Interior Department is expected to approve this month — may spill 392 barrels a day, the Coast Guard estimates.

A similar transportation peril could face the East Coast under drilling leases off the shores of New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland now being studied by the Interior Department.

Oil spillage, in the words of President Nixon's 1970 message on the subject, "represents a growing danger to our marine environment."

More specifically, the Audubon Society calculates that spills have soiled thousands of miles of shoreline and beaches; killed millions of seabirds; contaminated and killed unnumbered shellfish; hampered generations of sea life; may even have entered the food chain.

The nation's petroleum industry spent $288.3 million on water conservation in 1970, the American Petroleum Institute estimates. This outlay represents about 4.9 per cent of the reported after tax profits of the industry's 12 largest firms in that year ($5.6 billion).

The industry also operates 67 oil spill cleanup cooperatives in American harbors.

Larger Checks For Aged, Blind

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Reagan administration has announced it will grant a $3.4 million cost-of-living increase to 44,100 aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients starting April 1.

Human Relations Secretary James Hall told a meeting Monday of the state Commission on Aging that the $5-a-month increase will go to those recipients in nonmedical out-of-home care facilities such as rest homes and boarding homes.

He said the increase will be financed from funds "saved" under welfare reforms and was authorized under legislation which took effect March 4.

Motorcycle, Car Thefts Reported

Larkspur police yesterday reported the theft of a car and a motorcycle that were taken last week.

Police said a 1965 tan Ford Galaxie 500, license NJA247, was taken between 6:30 p.m. Friday and 7:55 a.m. Saturday from 2000 Redwood Highway. The owner was identified as Kenneth M. Giakovmis of that address.

A 1971 Yamaha Enduro, license 8DO445, belonging to Marc C. Vendetti of 40 Point San Pedro Road, San Rafael, was reportedly stolen from the west parking lot of Redwood High School between 8 and 9:30 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Bicycle Rider Treated In Crash

Rita Theresa Magnani, 21, of 355 Canal Street, Apt. 11, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for scrapes on her left arm and side received in a bicycle-automobile accident Saturday, according to hospital reports yesterday.

She was riding her bicycle on Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, at 4:25 p.m. and collided with a car turning onto the boulevard from a private driveway, police reported. Driver of the car, Jeanette Lois Wadsworth, 36, of 65 Manzanita Avenue, San Rafael, was not injured, police said.

Man Hurts Hand In Auto Accident

Michael L. Harrington, 35, of 339 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo, was treated at Marin General Hospital yeaterday for a hand injury received in an auto accident, according to hospital records.

San Anselmo police said the accident took place at 2:15 a.m. near Broadway and Bolinas Road. No further details were available.

Scalp Injured In Car Crash

Mathew John Sweters, 18, of Santa Rosa, was to see his own doctor for a cut nose and scalp received in an accident at 5:25 p.m. Saturday at Hetherton and Fifth streets, San Rafael, police reported yesterday.

Sweters was going south on Hetherton when his car collided with one going west on Fifth Street, driven by Sue I. Salinas, 34, of Sebastopol, according to police reports.

GAZER'S GUIDE

April Finds Moon Far Away

By Dr. Thomas D. Nicholson
Director, the American Museum of Natural History, New York
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

April 1: Mars and Saturn are in conjunction early this morning. In the sky this evening Venus, Mars, and Saturn are all quite close in the southwest, Venus the brightest, Saturn next (and the lowest), Mars the dimmest.

The moon is at apogee, farthest from Earth.

April 3: The star near the moon this evening, as both rise after 11 p.m., is Antares, in Scorpius. The moon occults the star in the sky over Asia and the Pacific Northwest.

April 5-6: Jupiter and the last-quarter moon rise close to one another after midnight, then separate slowly as both move up to the southern sky by dawn.

April 7: Venus reaches greatest elongation (46 degrees) in the evening sky. Now well to the left of the sun, the planet appears high in the southwest at dusk and remains visible for about four hours past sunset.

April 8: Venus and Mars are moving east (left) rapidly among the evening stars. This motion has taken them close to Saturn, but will now separate them from that planet. Mars passed Saturn on April 1; Venus passes Saturn today; both will be progressively farther east of Saturn on subsequent evenings.

April 12: Mercury ends its retrograde motion in the morning sky.

April 14: Perigee moon (nearest Earth) occurs only 10 hours after new moon. Perigee spring tides (with above-normal high tides) can be expected today.

April 16: The crescent moon, this evening, will be close to the three planets Venus, Mars, and Saturn, in the western sky. In the early evening, Venus is nearest the moon, Mars below and, to the left, Saturn below and well to the right. Venus will be occulted by the moon over parts of the Southern Hemisphere.

April 21: Maximum of the Lyrid meteor shower, with the first-quarter moon setting shortly after midnight. Single observer counts to 15 are expected during the early morning of the 22nd, less on the mornings before and after.

April 22: Venus and Mars are in conjunction. The two planets have been close all month and will remain close for the next month or so.

April 24: Jupiter, approaching opposition, becomes stationary in right ascension and begins retrograde (westerly) motion.

April 28: The moon is at apogee for the second time this month. Mercury is at greatest elongation (27 degrees) in the morning sky, but it is poorly placed for observing.

April 30: The moon again passes near Antares, the bright red star in Scorpius, this evenings, and occults the star in the sky over parts of Europe and Africa.

All month: Venus, Mars, and Saturn are prominent in the evening sky, Jupiter in the sky after midnight and during the morning. Early in April, Venus and Mars are quite close to the right (west) of Saturn; then pass Saturn each in turn; and move progressively farther to the left (east) of Saturn during the rest of the month, while remaining close to one another all month long. The three planets are in Taurus, and the reddish star nearby is Aldebaran. The group will be especially interesting on the evenings of the 15th, 16th, and 17th, when the crescent moon is nearby.

Jupiter is in Sagittarius. It rises about midnight and appears low in the south about dawn. Mercury becomes a poor morning star during the last week of April.

Moon phases
Last quarter, April 6 6:44 p.m., local time.
New moon, April 13 3:31 p.m., local time.
First quarter, April 20 7:45 a.m., local time.
Full moon, April 28 7:44 a.m., local time.

$150 Million In Freeway Building Off; No Funds

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Reagan administration announced today that $150 million worth of California freeway projects planned for construction within the next year and a half will be delayed until at least mid-1973.

State Public Works Director James A. Moe called a news conference to report that funds previously planned for expenditure on proposed freeways will not be available.

He blamed the situation on inflation; changes in state laws and federal programs which determine where the funds must be spent; federal "impounding" of California interstate highway money; and the diversions of state highway department funds into other programs such as smog control.

"Thirty-one projects valued at $150 million will be deferred from this and next fiscal year to 1973-74," Moe said.

In populous Los Angeles County alone, he said, the postponed projects total approximately $40 million. Others included a $13 million job in Orange County and $32 million worth of construction in San Diego County.

Moe, whose road-building agency operates on a $1 billion budget, told newsmen some communities wanting freeways have expressed "frustration" at "our inability to keep on schedule or even advance badly needed highway projects in their area."

"I'm not referring to those who don't want freeways, but those who do, and badly and now," he said.

Moe appealed to those communities who now find their projects have "slipped" further into the future to "better understand the basis for delays."

He said the federal government currently is impounding $300 million worth of California's share of interstate freeway funds and expressed pessimism that they would be released.

REMEMBERING THE 40 years since they helped charter the Marin Branch of the American Association of University Women are some of the remaining charter members. The branch scrapbook attracts attention of Mmes. Ruth Murray Jones, Gladys Gearhart and Helen Edward (seated from left), and Adele Paterson and Dorothy Walsh. Three are past presidents of the branch, which celebrates its 40th year this month.

Marin AAUW Unit Goes Strong After 40 Years

8 Charter Members Still Active

By BARBARA HOSMER

Twenty strong, a group of women from various colleges and universities banded together at Dominican College in San Rafael to form the Marin Branch of the American Association of University Women.

That was 40 years ago this month, and now the group numbers some 350 members. Of the original 20 charter members, eight remain active supporters of the AAUW activities which now include sections on reading arts, poetry, international relations, gardening, bridge and gourmet foods.

The branch also has programs of book discussions and lectures by prominent persons. It believes that AAUW fills the need of the woman who wishes to grow intellectually while she is rearing her family or pursuing a career.

The main fund-raising thrust of the branch and the national AAUW is providing fellowships for women's higher education, projects carried on today as they were in the branch's early years.

The eight remaining charter members are Mmes. Hazel Baxter, Thomas Edwards, E.B. Gearhart (president 1951-1953), Victor W. Jones (president 1937-1939), E. Dewart Lewis (president 1934-1937), Hugh Paterson, L.L. Walsh and Arthur C. Walters.

THEY REMEMBER with pride some of the projects of the early years of AAUW in Marin — the Mothers' Milk Agency, the Marin Motion Picture Council and other community projects for which the AAUW provided leadership and launched to the point that they could be taken over by others.

The branch's pre-school study group later became transformed into the first co-operative nursery school in Marin County, a special project of Mmes. Gearhart, Baxter and Edwards.

They remember the pre-school study group as one of the most popular sections, with members discussing educational aspects of childhood and having child psychiatrists as guest speakers.

In the early years, the branch combined literature, art and music into one section, which also had a large following. Now each is a separate section.

The charter members said that the general meetings in those early years of AAUW included such diverse programs as the history of anesthesia, trends in modern art, and women's place in a changing world.

They held the first discovery dinner in 1936 at the Ross Community Hall, with members displaying their handicrafts and putting on a variety show. The dinner, originally intended to discover hidden talent among the women, is now the traditional closing meeting of the club year each June.

ANOTHER TRADITION being carried on is the membership tea, but the charter members said that in those days one always wore a hat and gloves. The branch also put on formal dances along with the early program of study groups.

Education was the focus of the small group who began AAUW in Marin, and it is still the main focus of the Marin Branch, as well as the Mill Valley and Novato Branches of AAUW.

This year the three study topics chosen for all branches by national and state AAUW conventions are crisis in education, we the people and the beleagured earth.

Applying those topics locally, Branch members have been studying school budgets and the Seriano-Priest decision on school financing, they have studied the regional park district, the clean air initiative and other phases of land use and the environment.

The international relations section recently made China its study topic, as well as trade relations with Japan and the U.S.

It had as speakers Robert Chin of Merritt College, who recently returned from a trip to China, and Ed Radenzel of television station KQED's Newsroom, speaking on President Nixon's trip and its meaning. Other speakers on both mainland China and Nationalist China are booked for April and May.

THE BOOK section tackles current subjects, and the poetry section members bring unsigned original poems to monthly workshops for reading and analysis by the group. Charter member Ruth Murray Jones has been active in the poetry section since it began in 1946.

The newest section is travel, featuring foods and slides of many countries. Language sections practice their French and Spanish and the artistry section women both listen and do — hearing talks on such as Persian rugs and doing macrame and sand-casting.

The more traditional pursuits of gardening gourmet cooking and bridge-playing are also offered for Marin women who are college graduates.

Along with the section activities the Marin Branch members will again concentrate on fellowship fund-raising and are carrying on five monthly programs on education, international relations, culture, community and the status of women.

Mary Ryan Marries In San Anselmo Rite

Mary Kathleen Ryan of Sausalito became the bride of Laurence Benjamin Mersereau of San Anselmo Saturday in a ceremony at St. Anselm's Catholic Church in San Anselmo.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Paul H. Ryan of El Cerrito, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Laurence T. Mersereau of Belvedere.

Patricia Ann Ryan of Los Angeles was her sister's maid of honor, and her sisters Christine Marie Ryan and Barbara Jean Ryan of El Cerrito were bridesmaids.

Thomas Elliott of Tiburon was best man, and ushers were the bride's brother, Paul H. Ryan Jr., a student at the University of California at Irvine Medical School, and Allen B. Mitchell of Tiburon.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Meadow Club in Fairfax. On their return from a wedding trip to Palm Springs and Coronado the couple will live in San Anselmo.

A graduate of Holy Names High School in Oakland, the bride also was graduated from Dominican College and obtained her teaching credential at San Jose State College. She is employed as a teacher of English and journalism at San Jose Junior High School in Novato.

The bridegroom was graduated from Tamalpais High School and San Francisco State College and holds a master's degree from Dominican College. He is employed as a teacher of mathematics at San Marin High School in Novato. He is the brother of Mrs. Paul Rathblott of Tustin.

Why People Put Up With The Pet-Keeping Nuisance

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—One expert on human behavior now turns his expertise to a dog's life and why people help him lead it.

Dr. Ernest Dichter, noting that the pet population and pet food sales are booming, asks why in a supposed convenience age people put up with the extra work and nuisance of keeping pets.

The answers are several, especially in relation to dogs, says Dichter. A dog may be better than a mood pill, a kind of super-tranquilizer. You may come home tired and cantankerous. The rest of the family barks at you but the dog does not. He keeps his good mood, calms you down and stays faithful, no matter how grouchy you are.

"IN OTHER words, a dog is something of a family substitute," says Dichter.

Dichter, head of the Institute for Motivational Research, Inc., Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., writes in the current "Findings," an institute publication, that a dog's appeal also is in his almost perpetual youth. "A dog is almost a denial of death ... a dog may be the equivalent of 70 years old and still (be) lively and bouncing ... the continued high spirits of a 'senior citizen' dog is reassuring to the owner, a kind of hope that declining powers aren't necessarily inevitable."

A dog offers sort of a permanent parenthood. Even as he grows up and older, says Dichter, he continues to need to be taken care of—fed, walked, bathed, brushed and petted, in contrast to the frustration feeling of many parents with their children.

Children, in turn, after years of loving care suddenly revolt, become difficult to live with and eventually cut the apron strings entirely — no longer needing the services and advise of their parents.

A DOG offers "free" love. With your family—if you don't remember your wife's or husband's anniversary, if you don't understand your children —you may lose their love very quickly. But all you have to do is feed and pet a dog and he'll love you forever.

A dog is an appealing example of leisure, Dichter continues. Dogs know how to have fun, then how to relax and take a nap when they're tired, and without hangups or worries to trouble their sleep.

Dogs reward your training and work. When you train them, they stay trained. Children on the other hand start to develop minds of their own and start revolting against you. Dogs don't and there are few other situations in life where the individual can continuously enjoy a sense of mastery.

Jacqueline Crisp Wed In Larkspur

Jacqueline Crisp became the bride of David Presson Saturday in a ceremony at Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur. A reception in the church fellowship hall followed the ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Crisp of Corte Madera, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Presson of San Francisco.

Matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Daniel White of San Anselmo. The bridegroom's sister, Stacy Presson; Laura Mullaney; and Helen Royce were bridesmaids.

Carl Hering of Santa Cruz was best man, and guests were ushered to their seats by the bridegroom's brother, Jon Presson, and by Kevin Carr and Ken Friedman.

Jacqueline is a graduate of Redwood High School and the University of California at Santa Cruz. She is employed by Sacramento Country Day School in Sacramento. Tom Crisp of Davis is her brother, and her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Radloff of Napa and Mrs. Margaret Crisp of Oakland.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Lick-Wilmerding High School in San Francisco and U.C. at Santa Cruz. He is employed by the Experimental High School in Davis. His local grandmother is Mrs. Sarah Grant of San Francisco.

The newlyweds are living in Davis.

Bachelor Wonders How To Keep Ired Husbands, Women Away

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm in my early 20s, considered good looking, but please don't think me conceited. My first problem concerns the husbands in my apartment house, who are all jealous. My second problem involves girls who insist on paying my way to places I can't afford.

Three times men here have accused me of making it with their wives — who are a lot older than I. I'm a naturally friendly guy, but I keep my distance, even though one woman picks up my mail and brings it to my apartment just so she can have an excuse to see me.

I don't lead girls on at work, but often I find myself at an expensive lounge, with them footing the bill. I can't, on my salary — and I don't do the inviting.

Outside of getting married, which I'm not ready for and can't afford, how can I keep husbands off my back and women down? — CURIOUS FELLOW

DEAR C.F.:

I'd guess that you go all-out to be a great guy so everyone will like you —and women interpret your friendliness as "special interest." Husbands misinterpret it, too. What married man can trust a good looking, personality-plus bachelor?

Marriage isn't the answer, but if you'd get it around that you're semi-engaged, the girls might back off. — SUE

DEAR CURIOUS:

Husbands usually don't get fired up unless there's a bit of smoke. Are you perhaps so carried away with your handsome, debonair image that you lead the gals on? Certain older housewives need little encouragement, you know —and eager secretaries likewise.

A word you should add to your vocabulary is "no." — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

I was going steady with this great guy of whom I'm awfully proud. But my folks dislike him because at first he worked on a trash truck and then he got a job as a short-order cook and dishwasher. They think he'll be a bum, and call him "the jerk." He's only 18 — and lots of guys this age don't even have jobs. We were thinking of getting engaged but dad blew up.

He respects me and would never try anything. He's going into the Air Force soon and wants to learn mechanics. I think that's a good trade, but my parents sneer at what they call "dirty fingernail" work.

Is it so awful for a girl who is aiming at college to love a guy who isn't? — D.D.

DEAR D.:

Your parents' attitude may be an almost equal mixture of snobbery and common sense. They shouldn't downgrade an 18-year-old for the work he does, but rather compliment him on his industry. But they might also (wisely) look into the future, sensing that you two wouldn't always be compatible when the chemistry loses some of its fizz.

Stay friendly-but-free until your guy is out of the Air Force. — HELEN

P.S. The following letter might help your cause.

DEAR RAP:

My husband and I have nothing in common. I am a college graduate; he is a drop-out. I am idealistic and emotional. He is materialistic and logical. I hate spectator sports; he loves them. I love to dance; he hates it. I like travel; he wants to stay home. When I prefer to argue, he won't say anything. In everything, we seem to be opposite numbers.

Now, in our third year of marriage, we are just as "incompatible," and more deeply in love than ever. We have amazed a lot of people, some of whom believe we must have fantastic sexual attraction for each other. Actually, our secret is: moral values. Lying, cheating, hurtfulness are out. Friendship, trust, honesty, humility and respect are in. These values are the real "us" and this is why our love grows. All else is superficial. — MRS. R.R.

HERE'S A NICELY designed cocktail table by Kroehler called Mozambique, scaled to fit into most conversation groupings. With golden brown finish, it is 60 by 24 inches and has companions in a 24-inch square lamp table and a smaller 18-inch suare snacking or bunching table.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Filling The Cocktail Table Gap

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
(Distributed by General Features Corp.)

There's one category of home furnishings that leaves me cold as a piece of living room equipment, and that's the so-called cocktail or coffee table. My antipathy to these devices probably stems from the fact that I'm almost always moving fast, even in the quiet hours at home. Naturally I bump into things a lot.

So 200 skinned shins later I developed this pet peeve feeling about low tables of all sorts that get in the way of foot traffic.

The superbiggies get even more scorn because of the wasted time and effort getting to a seat in back of them. If one could just climb up and over those huge tables I might see their worth.

And have you ever tried to keep a giant coffee table looking neat? Very difficult. It's sort of like keeping tabs on magazines in the doctor's office.

Now if you've listened to all these complaints and still want to fill a gap in the furnishings scheme with a table, make it as simple a design as possible.

WHY NOT lean toward a long, slim shape that has enough of a chunky quality to balance the use of lots of upholstery. The slim characteristics of the table shown today are an example. Designed for Kroehler Manufacturing. Co. of Naperville, Ill., it's planned for floor-sitting comfort as well as sofa-sitting height, and there's sufficient walk-around room when it's in position.

The table is constructed of Mozambique wood veneers imported from the west coast of Africa and finished in a rich golden brown. The top captures the eye because of the way the graining is handled. The central strip of the top uses grain vertically; the edges use it horizontally.

Overall size is 60 by 24 inches — a nice compromise for any traditionally arranged conversation group of seating pieces.

Another focal point is the semicircular base treatment. Instead of four or six sticky legs, this table uses two half-rounds of wood covered in the same Mozambique veneers. The price is about $80.

There are other alternatives to using one large or long table in front of a sofa. A pair of small trunks make great pull-up tables and provide extra living room storage at the same time.

The plaster replicas of the capitals of columns also serve for those who come and sit and drink. But two or three of these smaller forms are required for at-hand convenience.

My preference is a sofa-back table and side tables. Then the floor space is free for floor sitters who like to rest their backs against the upholstered pieces. And it's a bit easier to shift furnishings for an impromptu dancing session if that heavy, supersize coffee table is not in the way.

No-Fault's Catching On —Even In Marriages . . .

By RODERICK NORDELL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Now that the no-fault concept is catching on in a comparatively safe field such as auto insurance, some have grown rash enough to extend it to the hazardous realm of marriage. Imagine, they say, what a day would be like for a typical no-fault cguple. Take Saturday . . .

She: Are you awake?

He: I am now.

She: I'm sorry

He: That's all right, it's nobody's fault.

She: I can't breathe. Did you remember to put the heat down last night?

He: I'm sorry, I guess I forgot after that phone call came from your parents.

She: Don't apologize. Nobody's to blame.

He: What time is it?

She: The clock says 4:30.

He: What do you mean, "The clock says . . ."?

She: I mean you didn't reset it after the power failure yesterday afternoon. It's really almost 9.

He: That certainly was stupid of me.

She: Nonsense.

He: Now why don't you just stay there and I'll bring you breakfast in bed.

She: You know that's the surest way to get me up.

He: I'm sorry.

She: Uh, uh, remember it's a no-fault day.

He: You're right as usual. I'm sorry I was sorry.

She: How about some nice faultless bacon and eggs?

He: Sounds great, but I need some socks.

She: Don't tell me the black ones are all mismatched again.

He: No, there doesn't seem to be any kind in my drawer.

She: Look in the laundry basket.

He: I already did.

She: Oh, I know, I put off doing the laundry because we ran out of fault-free detergent — I mean phosphate-free detergent.

He: Fortunately no guilt attaches to not doing the laundry.

She: Of course not.

He: There are a lot more important things than laundry.

She: You'll get no argument from me. Did you send for maps?

He: Maps?

She: Yes, for our vacation.

He: Guess I goofed on that one, or would have if there were such a thing as goofing.

She: Now you're getting the idea. Take these eggs — I'm sure not taking any responsibility for them.

He: Oh, they're not so bad.

She: At least the bacon is burned nicely.

He: Darling, you mustn't use those oblique ways of hinting things to your discredit.

She: Are you through with the sports section?

He: I have a feeling you're really asking for the front page, and I'm glad I don't need to feel any twinges of conscience for thoughtlessly keeping the whole paper to myself.

She: It's similarly delightful to have no regrets about the latest thing I didn't do.

He: What have you blamelessly not done now?

She: You know I haven't gotten used to the electric stove, and I didn't turn the burner off after I took away the teakettle, and I laid a loaf of bread on it.

He: On the no-jeopardy tea kettle?

She: No, on the burner, With the old gas stove you could see a flame, and I'd never lay a loaf of bread on a flame.

He: Relax, defense testimony is a thing of the past. Anyway, we've only had the electric stove two years, and —

She: Now you're making excuses for me, and that's not necessary in no-fault wedlock.

He: I'm sorry — that is, I'm not sorry.

She: That's better.

He: Now you're trying to exculpate me.

She: What?

He: Make me seem less culpable.

She: Thanks. It's nice to know there's no liability for illiteracy.

He: I was only offering an explana—

She: Never apologize, never explain. Isn't that what the original no-faulter, Evelyn Waugh, used to say?

He: Who's she?

She: Is that some sort of women's-lib wisecrack?

He: I don't think so. But in all innocence I may be guilty. It's so hard to say anything about anything any more.

She: I hope giving reasons like that doesn't mean you're acknowledging the possibility of being wrong.

He: Never fear. I didn't do that even when I was a bachelor.

She: Thank goodness. Our marriage is safe.

Brando: The Big Gun Who Plays Role Of 'Godfather'

By Louis Sweeney
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In Mario Puzo's bestseller, "The Godfather," there is a telling line in which one of the title character's sons realizes he has "never been completely honest" with his fiancee about his family:

"He had told her about them but always with little jokes and colorful anecdotes that made them seem more like adventures in a technicolor movie than what they were. And now his father had been shot down in the street and his eldest brother was making plans for murder . . ."

Now that the film of "The Godfather" has opened, it is paradoxical not only that it is cosmeticized with technicolor but that the members of the criminal "family" which the Godfather heads are filmed as those very adventurers rather than as a clan linked by corruption, whose "family" business is murder, extortion, mutilation, bribery, blackmail, and — incidentally — olive oil.

The "little jokes and colorful anecdotes" are there, too, in a film which also skillfully uses every bit of Hollywood's vast arsenal of glamour. For the Godfather, a very big gun: the legendary Marlon Brando.

Brando's memorable performance is worth seeing if you can stomach the violence implicit in every frame of the film. The Godfather, Don Vito Corleone, is the puppeteer of his lethal family which the ads suggest, a powerful figure. Brando plays him like some lawless king, almost majestic in the shuttered mahogany-lit room where his courtiers come to pay homage and beg favors.

His face is dark, wrinkled, brooding, still as a mask and with the drooping tragic mouth of a mask. The jaw, purposely distorted, looks full of rocks. His voice is deep, rasping, granite scraping on marble, with a sinister slowness. He wears a red rose and a formal suit for his daughter's wedding. As a wedding dispensation he promises to avenge the friend whose daughter has been attacked and severely beaten by two college boys.

With that scene director Francis Ford Coppola sets the stage for the film's ironic contrasts. Outside, in the sunlight, the gaiety, flowers and dancing of the huge family wedding; inside, the dark family business as usual.

ASKS FAVOR — Marlon Brando (right) plays the title role and listens as Frank Puglia, a supplicant, seeks a favor in "The Godfather," now playing at Cinema I in Corte Madera.

Coppola is a talented chameleon of a director whose previous films — "Finian's Rainbow," "You're a Big Boy Now," "The Rain People" — have been done in as diverse styles as this one is. This is certainly his most serious film, one that reminds me in its measured, intricate family scenes, of Luchino Visconti. But the vicious explictness with which he treats the film's central theme of crime is more what I'd expect from Sam Peckinpah. He lingers on the horrors.

Coppola, who also wrote the script with Mario Puzo, has been quiet faithful to the novel's grim variation on "One Man's Family." He even included some of the little anecdotes mentioned earlier, like the macabre one about the Godfather's favorite business technique: "I'll make him an offer he can't refuse." The offer is literally that — refusal means death.

Producer Albert S. Ruddy and director Coppola have assembled an extraordinary cast to back up Brando.

Al Pacino, who made his film debut as an addict in "The Panic in Needle Park," demonstrates here in the role of Michael Corleone that he's an actor of versatility and depth as he matches the formidable Brando shot for shot, veering from the war hero-college boy, the only straight member of the family, into the merciless gangster prince who succeeds the Godfather.

Robert Duvall gives a complex performance as the foster son Tom Hagen who has become the family lawyer. James Caan is explosive as the temperamental and sensual "Sonny" Corleone, Richard Castellano frightening as muscle man Clemenza, Diane Keaton perfectly cast as Michael's Yankee finacee who finds the family "wildly exotic." There are also interesting performances by Sterling Hayden as a crooked cop, John Marley as a movie mogul, and Alex Rocco as a totally realistic Las Vegas gambling operator.

The film, which runs over three hours, is too long and fatally corroded with violence. The acting, the poignant Nino Rota score with its Fellini overtones, the handsome Gordon Willis color camerawork in America and Sicily do much to distract us from that corrosion. But browse through the chilling black and white film stills which accompany the newest paperback version of the novel and you see a different "Godfather" emerge.

Campers Vex Tiburon Council

Like several players viewing the same scrabble board, Tiburon City Council members last night examined a camping prohibition ordinance, each with his own ideas about what words should be written in.

The council was considering a redraft of an ordinance prohibiting camping on private property for more than three consecutive days but, faced with the divergence of views, did not come up with a solution.

One concern was how to stop the bay side of Tiburon streets from becoming lined with campers and trailers, yet permit Tiburon children to "camp out" in their back yards.

Another was how to define camping and sleeping in order to preclude the arrest of a person who happened to doze off while sitting in his car.

A third was that at least one councilman believed the proposed ordinance, as written, was not strong enough.

Another thought there should be no ordinance at all.

A strict ban on camping was proposed earlier this year and had passed first reading but was reconsidered and sent back to the city attorney to incorporate the idea of the three-day time limit.

Councilman Branwell D. Fanning complained that the original intent of the ordinance was to ban camping, and that as it stood now, persons with trailers and campers could come into the city and stay for three days, then shift position and stay for another three and continue moving almost indefinitely.

The ordinance, he said, has "been butchered to the point where you can't make any sense out of it." The original intent was to get rid of campers."

Councilman M. Carlisle Becker took an opposite view. "This whole thing has gotten to be like the old argument, 'How many angels can fit on the head of a pin'," he said. "The whole thing should be thrown out.

If the city is considering regulating activity to this extent, he said, it should "put up signs at the entrance to town which say 'no,' and seriously consider behavior codes."

Councilman Anne L. Ellinwood disagreed. "If we don't have an ordinance, how can the police respond when they get a complaint?" she asked.

A move to table the ordinance failed 3-2, but it was postponed to April 24 to coincide with the hearing date for a planning commission report on a zoning ordinance amendment which would allow outdoor and seasonal uses of some land.

The council deleted a newly-added paragraph from a proposed ordinance which would impose a tax on property development, then passed the ordinance.

On a motion by Councilman Albert H. Sennett, the council deleted a provision which would have credited the value of any land dedicated to the city by a subdivider for open space against the tax owed.

Councilmen rejected a bid by Becker to double the tax rate charged under the ordinance.

Tiburon Ponders The Pesticide Question

The Tiburon City Council last night expressed concern over the use of pesticides and herbicides and pledged to let the Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment know which ones will be used by city crews.

The council, however, did not approve the committee's recommendation that it ban all use of pesticides and herbicides by the city.

The two groups were in agreement that the use of such chemicals should be carefully studied, and that scientists should be consulted beforehand. The city uses very few pesticides and herbicides now, officials said.

Under terms of the loose agreement, the committee will provide the city administration with information about the chemicals so it can answer citizens' questions about which to use at home.

The Tiburon City Council Also:

CONSTRUCTION — Adopted the state's uniform construction codes, but passed a motion acknowledging that the city's business district was a fire hazard and did not conform to a portion of the code relating to fire danger. The same acknowledgement had been present under the former building codes, said Mayor Denis T. Rice.

SIDEWALK — Told Ernest Nevers of 2251 Centro East that it would consider what, if any legal action to take against Lawrence Stotter to have him remove a sundeck fromhis home at 2244 Vistazo East. It was ruled nonconforming in 1969. The deck overlooks Nevers's home.

ANNIVERSARY — Passed unanimously a resolution commending Belvedere on its forth coming 75th anniversary.

LANDSCAPING — Approved an agreement with Valley Crest Landscaping Co. for landscaping the El Marinaro section of Tiburon to be financed by bonds.

STOP SIGNS — Approved the installation of stop signs at four locations: Silvarado Drive at Comstock, Lyford Drive at Acela, Acela Drive at Lyford and Centro East at Solano.

RETIREMENT — Announced its intention to add the city's new police force to the state retirement system. Formal approval of the system will come later by resolution, said city Mgr. Bert A. Balmer.

ANNEXATION — Continued indefinitely the application for annexation of a 10-foot strip of land at 5070 Paradise Drive, owned by Sat Suga.

Two Choices For Children Concerts

Subscribers to the children's concert series sponsored by the Marin Symphony Association will have a choice of attending one of two sit-in concerts presented by Orchestra Piccola, a youth group also sponsored by the association.

The two concerts are: on April 15 in six performances starting at 8:45 a.m. at San Rafael High School, and on June 3 in six performances starting at 8:45 a.m. at Marin Art and Garden Center, Ross.

For these concerts the children will sit inside the Orchestra Piccola, one child on each side of a musician. Demonstration of the instruments will be made, and after the concert each child will move to another area for an opportunity to become acquainted with other kinds of instruments.

The Marin Symphony manager, Mrs. Robert L. Schultz, said that because of the "tremendous response" to the series early reservations are advisable. The deadline is April 6.

Subscribers who have not received reservation blanks may call the Marin Symphony Association office in Ross. No additional tickets are available for non-subscribers.

Job Preference For War Vets Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson has ordered that unemployed veterans be given absolute preference for openings in federally financed job training programs.

The previous government policy had been to give veterans first preference up to a certain quota of training slots, usually 50 per cent. February unemployment figures showed there were 400,000 veterans without jobs.

Silent Hearing On Drainage District

The San Rafael City Council conducted a silent public hearing last night on the proposed East San Rafael drainage assessment district.

During a special meeting called to hear property owners' complaints on proposed engineering plans and assessments, none of the seven property owners present spoke.

No information was presented before the council last night on either question. According to Edwin N. Ness, bond attorney for the district, "no additional action" was needed last night other than the public hearing, "no documentation, therefore, has been submitted to the city council for consideration at this time."

According to City Engineer Ely Caillouette Jr., the drainage plan would provide channels, pipes, a ponding area, pumping station and a pipeline to San Rafael Bay. All this would halt flooding in the 500-acre area, he said, opening it for development.

The city council is expected to authorize formation of an assessment district at next Monday's meeting. Bids on the work, totaling $1,238,292 have already been received and rejected, because of a technicality in the opening process.

Councilman Fred Jensen argued last night that the district as a whole has made no provision for assessing its property owners for routine maintenance on pipes and pumping stations, and dredging swales and the pond. Council agreed and ordered Ness to set up a total maintenenace program as soon as possible.

The council last night also interviewed seven of 10 candidates for the San Rafael Board of Education: James Looney, Irwin Taranto, Dr. Melvin B. Fox, Marie J. Sessi, Donald R. Wellington, Alice M. Vipiana and Charles B. Peek.

The council will interview Donald R. Urquhart, former board member Carl J. Brown and Paul McMullen at a closed meeting next Monday beginning at 7:30 p.m. A decision will probably be reached that night on who will succeed Paul L. Jones on the board, according to Mayor C. Paul Bettini.

NAACP Leader Studying U.S. Role In Africa

JOHANNESBURG (UPI)—Civil rights leader Roy Wilkens said Monday U.S. corporations in South Africa should examine closely whether they were giving black workers equality of opportunity in terms of "the American tradition."

Wilkens, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), told a news conference it was necessary to consider whether black Africans would be better or worse off if U.S. companies withdrew from South Africa.

"How many black jobs would be lost if General Motors were to pack up and go home to Detroit?" Wilkins asked.

He urged U.S. corporations here to "follow the American tradition within the context of legality."

Brakes Fail On Runaway Auto

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A runaway car rolled down steep California Street Monday, crashed into a popular flower stand and came to a stop on the stairs of the city's tallest skyscraper.

The two women and four children in the vehicle escaped injury.

Police said the driver, Johanna Bualat, 35, told them her brakes failed.

The car narrowly missed several pedestrians and automobiles before stopping on the steps outside the Bank of America headquarters.

Eighth To Die

Eric Bryant Saterlie, of Mill Valley, who was killed in an automobile accident Saturday, was the eighth person to die in Marin County in auto accidents this year, and not the seventh as reported yesterday in the Independent-Journal. There were five traffic fatalities this date last year.

Those In Uniform

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Pentagon reports there are 2,425,051 men and women in uniform —the lowest figure since the Korean war buildup of 1950.

Crash Apparently Caused By Fatal Heart Attack

A Santa Rosa businessman apparently suffered a heart attack which was followed yesterday by a four-car accident in the 100 block of Petaluma Boulevard North, Petaluma.

Phillip Elden Heyer, 55, was pronounced dead on arrival at Hillcrest Hospital. He owned and operated the Heyer Real Estate Agency in Santa Rosa.

Police said he was driving northbound at 11:30 a.m. when he suddenly veered into the southbound lane and struck head-on a car driven by Walter D. Kneeland, 55, of 831 B Street, Petaluma. Heyer's car also struck two parked cars, pushing them onto the sidewalk.

The Sonoma County Coroner's office said the exact cause of death has not been determined, but that initial reports indicate a heart attack.

Heyer is survived by his wife, Mildred, and two sons. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Daniels Chapel of the Roses, Santa Rosa.

VD And The Middle Class

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Thousands of middle class women have venereal disease and do not know it, according to an authority on social diseases.

All women from 18 to 25 should be tested for gonorrhea twice a year to combat the rising number of cases in which women are found to be suffering from the disease but were unaware of it because the infection caused no noticeable symptoms, said Dr. Malcolm T. Foster of Washington University.

Foster addressed a symposium on VD by the Los Angeles County Medical Association Monday.

Vega's Assembly Line Running Again

LORDSTOWN, Ohio (UPI)—The first Chevrolet Vega to be produced in the United States in 23 days rolled off the assembly line at the General Motors plant at 5:31 p.m. Monday, signaling a return to work of about 10,000 striking workers.

GM said the assembly line was running smoothly late Monday, although not up to its 100-car-per-hour capacity. The Vega is produced only in this huge complex.

Angela's 'Love' For Jackson Told

By MARY LEYDECKER

SAN JOSE — The bloody terror of hostages held at gunpoint in a rented van was described against the background of a passionate love affair as Angela Davis's trial opened yesterday.

In his opening statement, prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr. portrayed Miss Davis as the woman who had bought hundreds of rounds of ammunition, studied books on violence and made plans which culminated in the shoot-out in August 1970 at Marin Civic Center.

All of this was done, Harris claimed, because of Miss Davis's consuming desire to free the late George Jackson, one of the Soledad Brothers, from prison.

"Beneath the cool academic veneer is a woman capable of committing violence under passion," Harris said of Miss Davis, a former university instructor.

The most "open disclosure of her feelings," Harris said, came in heretofore unrevealed letters she wrote Jackson from her cell in Marin County Jail.

"It won't be pleasant to offer into evidence letters as personal as these," Harris added, saying the letters had been smuggled into San Quentin and found among Jackson's possessions after he died in an abortive escape attempt last August.

The relationship between the two, mainly conducted by mail, culminated in a meeting at the Marin County Jail last summer in which "close, passionate and physical involvement" took place when the two finally came face to face, according to Harris.

"The defendant considered herself married to George Jackson," Harris concluded. (Miss Davis wears a gold ring on her fourth finger.)

GEORGE JACKSON
'Object of passion'

In addition to the letters, Harris yesterday also revealed for the first time additional bits and pieces of evidence the state will use in its effort to convict Miss Davis of murder, kidnap and conspiracy in connection with the August 1970 shoot-out in which Judge Harold J. Haley and three other persons died.

The case against her is circumstantial, Harris conceded, since there are "no surviving witnesses who heard conversations in which she expressed her intent."

However, one of the guns brought into the courtroom by Jonathan Jackson, younger brother of George Jackson, was hidden in a valise under six books on revolution, two of which had Miss Davis's name written in them, Harris said.

The evidence also will show, he said, that Miss Davis purchased hundreds of rounds of ammunition during the summer preceding the August 1970 shooting.

One of her visits to a Los Angeles sports shop, where she was apparently a regular customer, was made in the company of young Jackson and his mother.

The plot culminated, Harris said, during the week preceding the shoot-out, when Jonathan Jackson visited his brother at San Quentin several times. He was accompanied by Miss Davis on each visit but she was not allowed to talk to George Jackson, the prosecutor said.

Harris offered his belief that George Jackson communicated the plot details to James McClain, a fellow prisoner in the prison's adjustment center.

McClain, the convict on trial in Haley's courtroom when the escape attempt started, was ready for the entrance of heavily armed Jonathan Jackson into the courtroom. McClain took overat that point, Harris said witnesses will testify and McClain supervised the selecting of hostages and cooled the tempers of his cohorts.

Harris said evidence will show that McClain taped a sawed off shotgun, purchased two days earlier by Miss Davis and young Jackson, to Judge Haley's neck.

After the party of convicts and hostages — who were the judge, three women jurors and Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas — left the courtroom, one of the convicts told Independent-Journal photographer Jim Kean, "We want the Soledad Brothers freed by 12 o'clock."

Harris indicated that during the shoot-out Miss Davis was waiting at San Francisco International Airport where she hoped to be joined by the escapees.

ANGELA DAVIS
'Woman in love'

(Two weeks later a car borrowed by Jonathan Jackson from a San Jose woman which he never returned was discovered in the airport parking lot, Harris said. He said witnesses will testify that George and Jonathan Jackson's mother told the woman where her car was.)

The rendezvous at the airport never took place, of course, because the yellow rental van in which the hostages were held only went a short distance before a volley of shots rang out.

Harris said Thomas will testify that Jonathan Jackson fired at a San Quentin officer in the parking lot with a gun he had taken from a deputy sheriff.

Jackson pulled his bloody hand back into the van, Harris said Thomas will testify, and then Thomas looked back at Hale, on whom convict Ruchell Magee had a gun trained.

"Gary Thomas will tell you how he watched Judge Haley's face slowly dissolve," Harris said.

Thomas then grabbed the gun from Jackson and fired at him and Magee, Harris said. (He added that a tape recording of the actual shooting made inadvertently in the sheriff's department runs only 19 seconds.)

When law officers reached the van they found Haley — who also had a wound in his chest made by a gun fired by convict William Christmas — dead, along with McClain, Jackson and Christmas. Magee was wounded in the chest and Thomas injured so "he will never use his legs again," Harris said. One woman juror also was wounded and the other two were in shock.

As an aftermath, Harris said the evidence will show Miss Davis hurriedly took a plane from San Francisco to Los Angeles. Inside Jonathan Jackson's wallet, found on his body, was the telephone number of an "out of the way" phone booth near the American Airlines desk at the terminal.

Throughout yesterday's recital of the evidence against her, Miss Davis sat impassively chewing gum and seldom glancing at the 12 jurors and four alternates in the crowded courtroom.

Proposed 114-Unit Plan Too Dense, Panel Claims

A proposed 114-unit development in an unincorporated area adjoining the town was found to be too dense by the Corte Madera Board of Design last night.

The board suggested that Johnny Ribiero Builders Inc. of San Rafael develop the 7.8-acre parcel at 66 Tamal Vista Boulevard with one unit for each 4,000 square feet, according to William G. McBride, zoning administrator. The builder now plans one stucco and redwood unit for each 2,600 to 2,800 square feet, he said.

The board also felt the developer should build smaller units, McBride said. The Ribiero company plans 70 three-bedroom units and 44 two-bedroom, he said.

The plan for the unincorporated land was submitted to the town as a courtesy because Corte Madera plans to annex the land when it is developed.

284 Trapped King Salmon Are Rescued

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state Department of Fish and Game says 284 adult king salmon trapped during a freak spring run on the Calaveras River near Stockton have been rescued.

The department said Monday an estimated 500 fish were stranded near where Highway 99 crosses a diversion canal after water was released into the ditch.

Cars Crash In Avoiding Deer

Deer running across the road apparently caused two accidents in Marin during the night, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The first was at 9:45 p.m. yesterday on Bear Valley Road near Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. Albert H. Lozano Jr., of 185 Tamalpais Road, Fairfax, swerved, according to officers, to avoid hitting a deer and crashed, suffering minor injuries.

The second was about 12:45 a.m. today on Nicasio Valley Road north of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. Stephen R. Helber, of 64 Tamalpais Road, Forest Knolls, also swerved to avoid hitting a deer and received minor injuries when his car ran off the road, officers said.

Mother, Sons Shot In Fight

DIXON, Ill. (UPI)—A mother and her two sons were injured Monday night in a gun fight over which television program to watch.

Clara Barton, 45, was in good condition at Dixon Public Hospital with gunshot wounds in each leg. Her two sons Joey, 14, and Rick, 16 were treated for gunshot wounds in the leg, back and face, and released.

"I had just got done scrubbing and wanted to watch a quiz show," Mrs. Barton said. She said her son Joey kept changing channels so she slapped him and the other son jumped in.

"I grabbed one of those little guns," she said referring to a .22 caliber pistol loaded with birdshot, "and shot him in the legs."

In the melee for the gun, police said, the mother and other son were wounded.

Island Near Iceland Missing

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — Four Icelandic fisherman set out for a rocky island that sits a few miles offshore and suddenly discovered it wasn't there any more.

Since the fishermen found out last week that Geirfugladrangur Rock, as the island was called, was missing, Icelandic authorities have been trying to find out what happened to it. So far they have been unsuccessful.

Officials said losing the island wouldn't be any great catastrophe except that it is used as a reference point in Iceland's recent decision to extend its offshore fishing limit from 12 to 50 miles.

HEARING TESTS CONDUCTED IN SAN RAFAEL

Electronic hearing tests will be given at 903 Fifth Ave., San Rafael by J. Paul Messinger "Certified Hearing Aid Audiologist"

J. PAUL MESSINGER
Certified Hearing
Aid Audiologist

Anyone who has trouble hearing or understanding is welcome to come in for a test using the latest electronic equipment to determine his or her particular degree of hearing loss. Diagrams showing how the ear works and some of the causes of hearing loss will be available.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year, if he has any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told an aid won't help should have a hearing test and find out about the very latest hearing aids. They are much improved.

The free hearing tests will be held at 903 Fifth Ave. five days per week. If you need an evening appointment call or write The Messingers House of Hearing Aids, Phone 456-5227.

KEEPING TRACK — Bert Inman, a census enumerator in Marin County, displays a trunk full of census folders. He's got a folder for each of the 80 households he visits once a month. And some of the visits are dandies! (Independent-Journal photo)

UNUSUAL EXPERIENCES

All Sorts Of—Uh—Dress Grect Census Enumerator

By JAY GOODWIN

The front door swung open and Bert Inman was greeted by a beautiful, completely naked young girl.

She nonchalantly invited him into the house. He feigned nonchalance and stepped in.

Another girl — also completely naked — smiled as he sat down beside her on the couch and fumbled with his official-looking folder. Fidgeting in his seat, he tried not to stare at his lovely, immodest hosts. A complicated manila card finally emerged from his folder and he began.

"What's your name?" he asked.

She told him.

"Your age?"

She answered.

"Your education? . . . Social Security number? . . . are you buying or renting your home?"

She answered all his questions.

Shifting nervously, Inman filled in the blanks on his card. Finally, he worked his way down to the clincher: "Were you working last week, keeping house, or doing something else?"

Politely, she answered him again.

With that, Inman closed his folder, thanked the girls for their cooperation, took one last look and left.

"I'd have to say that was my most unusual experience as a census taker," said Inman. "For a man my age, a sight like those two nude girls can really make your heart race. I tried not to act surprised, but I sure was!"

Bert Inman, 70, was an assistant manager of engineering and service departments for Westinghouse Corp. before retiring. For the past three years, to keep himself active, he has worked one week each month as a census taker.

The other day, amid the plants and flowers of his backyard in Greenbrae, he put down his gardening tools, pulled up a chair and chatted about his census work.

"To begin with," he corrected, "we're not census takers. We're census enumerators."

He's hired by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of Labor Statistics to help monitor, on a month-by-month basis, the size of the nation's available labor force and the current level of unemployment.

During one week each month — that week which contains the 19th day of the month — Inman and thousands of enumerators fan out across the country surveying a random sample of 65,000 homes. Their findings are forwarded to regional offices and fed into the bureau's computer center in Jeffersonville, In.

Each month, the bureau releases its results which are eagerly gobbled up by the media and passed to the public as the "official" level of nationwide unemployment.

Inman has about 80 households, throughout Marin County and in Petaluma, on his route. He visits or calls each house each month. Households selected for the survey are visited for four months and then dropped for eight months.

After eight months, they are "picked up" again for another four months. When the second four months series is completed, the household is dropped from the survey forever.

Participating households receive nothing from the government for their trouble. Even so, Inman rarely meets resistance.

"In the three years I've been doing this," he said, "I must have surveyed around 3,000 homes. Out of those 3,000, I've only had five people turn me down."

One of those five was particularly resistant, Inman recalled.

"He gave me one minute to clear off his property. I tried to explain the survey to him but he ran into the house and came out with a gun. I don't know if he would have actually shot me, but he was mad as hell. I didn't stay around to find out."

That incident was the exception, not the rule. Usually Inman receives a warm welcome in the homes he visits.

"I'm a good listener and people like to tell me their problems. I've made a lot of good friends in this business," he said, beaming.

"I don't try and sell the program or the government. If the people refuse to answer my questions, they'll usually say, 'it's an invasion of privacy' and I don't challenge them."

When a household refuses to cooperate, the Bureau of Labor Statistics sends out a long letter explaining the purpose of the survey and the confidentiality of their answers.

Inman then returns for a second try. If it's still "no", the household is dropped from the survey.

"The people I contact every day are intensely loyal to this country. It amazes me. They may be critical, but as a whole, they're solidly in love with their country," he said.

"People are really fine. Especially laboring people — the old solid type.

The higher the education, the more defiant people seem to get. But I like it. The next time I go back to one of them we're much more amicable.

"People who are pressed or in financial trouble are most likely to be nice and invite you in for a cup of coffee. I don't really know why. Maybe it's because they want to talk about their troubles."

In two years, his wife, Amy, will retire from her job as secretary at Granada School in the Reed School district. A that time, he expects to quit his census taking job, sell the house on 36 Manor Road that he's lived in for 22 years and move into the country.

He has one son, Donald, and three daughters, Donna Carlton, Cynthia Walker and Lynn Inman, all grown and out of the house.

"I really like my job, but I won't miss it," he confided. "I'm ready for something else."

Trike-Car Crash — Two Boys Hurt

Two San Rafael boys remained hospitalized today with broken legs received Saturday in a tricycle-auto accident.

Julian Sanchez, 6, of 1845 Second Street, San Rafael, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a broken left leg, and Kenny Simone, 4, of 38 Jessup Street, was in good condition at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco with a broken right leg.

Julian was driving a large-wheeled tricycle, with Kenny as a passenger, north on Hart Street at 1 p.m. Saturday when their tricycle hit the right side of a car driven east on Jessup Street by Barbara Mary Holt, 69, of San Francisco, police said.

Motorcycle Strikes Pole, Rider Hurt

Gerald P. Kline of 1278 San Jose Boulevard suffered back pains when his motorcycle struck a telephone pole near his home at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, according to Novato police.

Kline told officers he was driving east on San Jose Boulevard when the throttle on the motorcycle stuck. Police said he was to be treated at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital, but the hospital had no record of treatment.

Planners Delay Mass Rezoning

The Marin County Planning Commission yesterday considered without resolve the second of five mass rezonings aimed at limiting growth within the county's 210,000-acre agricultural preserve.

Yesterday's proposal, which called for rezoning a 30,000-acre chunk of the preserve west and south of Tomales Bay, was continued to April 24 for additional study.

Planning department staff recommended that the bulk of the land be rezoned from the present two acres per homesite to a new designation of 60 acres per homesite.

The department maintains that the rezoning would protect the agricultural industry from the encroachment of urban development as demanded under state law.

The law — the Williamson Act — states that lands within the agricultural preserve must be zoned in a manner compatible with agricultural use.

The planning department claims that 60-acre zoning is the most compatible for Marin's dairying and livestock grazing operations.

As with the first rezoning — approved last week by the county board of supervisors — the proposal brought protest from some ranchers and landowners, who said the low-density zoning will reduce their property values and make it difficult to sell their land.

Among those voicing opposition yesterday was Marin Municipal Court Judge David C. Baty who owns about 60 acres south of Olema.

Baty, joined by others, labeled the rezoning a "confiscation" of property by those wishing to acquire open space at the expense of a few landowners.

"There are some things the majority doesn't do to the minority," Baty said, adding that the rezoning violates a basic premise upon which the nation was founded.

Using a blackboard, he presented figures showing he would lose more than $100,000 on his 60 acres under the proposed rezoning. He urged that his land, along with other properties in the "Olema expansion area," be excluded.

Baty was followed by Harold Gregg, executive director of the Marin Conservation League, who supported the rezoning and added that the county couldn't be concerned with protecting the investments of speculators such as Baty.

About 12 persons spoke yesterday, most in opposition to the rezoning.

Among ranchers opposing it was dairyman Waldo Giacomini, a veteran of several battles with conservationists, who disputed the planning department's claim that residential use of land is incompatible with dairying.

The commission, after about three hours of discussion, ordered the proposal continued with certai properties — including the scenic Inverness pocket between Inverness and Inverness Park — removed for separate consideration April 10.

Belvedere Looks Over Ordinances

The Belvedere City Council last night accepted 10 of the 12 recommendations suggested by the city's planning commission for changes in local zoning ordinances.

The 12 recommendations, as well as an additional 10 to 15 expected at future meetings, originated in a planning report prepared by Livingston and Blayney, a San Francisco planning consultant firm.

Having accepted the 10 recommendations, the council will eventually consider draft ordinances to implement them.

A recommendation dealing with building height limitations was referred back to the planning commission for further study after Councilman Allan Steinau pointed out a possible plan.

As proposed, it would have limited multiple-dwellings to three stories or 36 feet and single-dwellings, duplexes, and the multiple-dwellings planned for the Cove water lots to two stories or 28 feet.

Steinau cited the possibility of constructing a "massive building" 36 feet high on a lot with a 30 per cent slope. Such a building would have been permissible under the proposed recommendation. The council and Lawrence Livingston, of Livingston and Blayney, agreed that further discussion of the "loophole" was in order.

The recommendations, that were accepted by the council, dealt with use of substandard lots, establishing new zoning districts, minimum lot size requirements, open space requirements and covered structure limitations.

They also covered front, side and rear setback requirements, distance between neighboring building requirements and variances for land donated to the city.

Action on the Livingston-Blayney recommendation to create a new multiple-dwelling zone in the cove water lots area was deferred to a meeting.

The council also authorized the city manager to seek bids on a new irrigation system for the main playing area of Belvedere's park.

Pop-up sprinkler heads will be purchased at a cost "not to exceed $4,250." A number of councilmen expressed the hope that the new grass would be ready for use by June.

Booking Made On Concealed Firearm

Timothy Peter Bourgerie, 20, of 36 Fair View Terrace, Petaluma, was arrested today on suspicion of possession of a concealed firearm, dangerous drugs and narcotics paraphernalia.

He was booked into city jail for arraignment today in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court. Bourgerie was arrested at 1:30 a.m. when police stopped his car for a traffic violation at F and Ninth streets. Officers said a .22-caliber revolver was hidden in a pants pocket and that white powder believed to be a narcotic was found in the car.

Bicyclist Hurt In Road Crash

James Noel Ladd, 15, of Lagunitas Road, Ross, was to see his own doctor for bruises on his left hand elbow and knee, received at noon Saturday in a bicycle-automobile accident, police said yesterday.

Ladd, going east on Second Street, collided with a car turning onto second from D Street. The driver of the car was Jerome Khan, 55, of 65 Via Cheparro, Greenbrae, police reported.

Pay Raise For Sonoma Workers

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors yesterday approved salary increases ranging from 2.5 to 7.5 per cent.

The salary package, as recommended by the county salary survey team, included no raises for 31 employees; 2.5 per cent for 1,521 employees; 5 per cent for 551; and 7.5 per cent for 20 employees. Elected department heads will receive a 2.8 per cent increase.

County Administrator David L. Nichols called the overall 3.3 per cent raise one of the most conservative in recent years.

The raises will cost $808,000. Of that amount, $445,500 will be paid by the county and the remaining $362,500 through state and federal sources.

Man Kidnaped To Geyserville

A 23-year-old San Rafael man who stopped in Corte Madera Shopping Center to adjust the fan belt of his car was forced at gunpoint to drive a young couple to Geyserville Saturday, Corte Madera Police said yesterday.

David W. Wiles of 5 Spring Grove Drive told police he was stopped in the shopping center parking lot about 10 a.m. when a teen-age girl and a man asked for a ride.

Wiles agreed to a ride to Larkspur, police said, but once the car was under way, the man described as about 25 pulled a gun and ordered the trip north.

Once in Geyserville, the man grabbed the car keys and fled with his female companion, about 18 years old, police said.

Kentfield Oldsters Housing Plan Passes

A move by some Kentfield residents to block construction of a senior citizens housing project in their neighborhood was rejected yesterday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

The commission, on a 5-1 vote with Commissioner John F. West dissenting, approved — for the second time — a 120-unit apartment development proposed by the Catholic Social Service.

The development is planned on a five-acre parcel at Laurel Grove Avenue and Hanken Drive — site of the Dominican Priory.

It was first proposed a yeara-go but encountered strong opposition from nearby residents who took the matter to court and were upheld in their appeal based on a loophole in the county code.

The loophole was closed earlier this year by supervisors and the proposal is working its way through the appeal procedure once again.

Opposing residents, headed by attorney Louis F. Hawkins of 4 Hanken Drive, argued yesterday that the development would detract from the atmosphere of the neighborhood and thus reduce property values.

The commission, however, supported by several other Kentfield residents, rejected the argument.

Hawkins and the others have five working days to appeal the commission's approval to the board of supervisors.

The Marin Planning Commission also:

RANCHETTES — Continued to April 10 a use permit and subdivision hearing for the proposed Martinelli Farms development near Point Reyes Station. The developer, Markham Corp., has requested approval for numerous small ranches on the property.

OCEANA MARIN — Continued to April 10 consideration of a development plan for Oceana Marin No. 5 at Dillon Beach. The plan calls for 24 two-story apartment units, tennis court and swimming pool.

REZONING — Continued to June 26 consideration of rezoning some 231 acres in Sleepy Hollow from R-1 (one home per acre) to RSP (planned community). Rezoning was requested by Frank G. Chambers and Fred P. Cox for land located at the end of Tarry Road.

QUARRY — Approved a use permit for Commissioner George P. Leonard to continue to operate two rock quarries near Shoreline Highway at Stinson Beach. Leonard did not take part in the decision.

INDUSTRIAL PARK — Continued to April 10 a tentative map hearing for Del Pantano Industrial Park north of Novato at Gnoss Airport.

CAMPGROUND — Continued to April 10 a use permit hearing for expansion of a campground in Olema. The campground is owned by Larry H. Marks Jr.

WATER PLANT — Approved plans from the Marin Municipal Water District to expand its San Geronimo water treatment plant in Woodacre. The plans call for construction of a third water tank and another building.

CAPITAL OUTLAY — Continued to April 10 a hearing on the proposed $37.5 million capital improvement program for the county over the next six years.

Profit-Skimming Innocent Plea

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Nicholas J. Guercio, 45, of Tamalpais Valley, has pleaded innocent in U.S. District Court to a charge of profit skimming.

He was arrested Feb. 26 and charged with making false statements to a federally insured savings and loan association about his topless-bottomless bar in San Francisco's Tenderloin area.

A jury trial was set Friday for June 5.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE
No. 62736

Superior Court of the State of California for the County of Marin

Application of PHILLIP RICHARD WESPECHER for Change of Name

WHEREAS PHILLIP RICHARD WESPECHER, petitioner, has filed an application with clerk of this Court for an order changing applicant's name from PHILLIP RICHARD WESPECHER to PHILLIP RICHARD WEST.

IT IS ORDERED that all persons interested in the above-entitled matter appear before this Court at 9:00 A.M., on 7th April, 1972, in the courtroom of Dept. 3 at Hall of Justice, Civic Center, San Rafael, California, and show cause, if any, why the application for change of name should not be granted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this order to show cause be published in Independent-Journal, a newspaper of general circulation printed in the County of Marin, California, once a week for four successive weeks prior to the date set for hearing the application.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO CIRCULATE PETITION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN of the intention of the persons whose names appear hereon of their intention to circulate the petition within the Town of Corte Madera for the purpose of superseding Town Ordinance No. 541. A statement of the reasons of the proposed action as contemplated in said petition is as follows:

Ordinance No. 541, adopted April 19, 1971, prezoned Assessor's Parcels 34-011-97, 02, 03, 04, 05, and 09 to R2 (multiple residential) prior to annexation to the Town of Corte Madera. This land was formerly under County jurisdiction and zoned A2-B2 (low density-single family residential). The 1963 general plan for the Town of Corte Madera showed this land as future industrial zone.

On January 10, 1972, the Town Planning Commission approved a planned unit development of 540 to 550 units of town houses and apartments, even though members of the public who had attended prior hearings on this proposal had been overwhelmingly opposed to high density development of this area.

This petition requests that the Town Council supersede Ordinance No. 541 with a new zoning ordinance reclassifying this area as single family-residential. If the Town Council should fail to act in accordance with this petition, the proposal would then be put to the electorate as an initiative.

Environment Design Plan Is Approved

The Petaluma City Council last night adopted its environmental design plan and rejected a planning commission recommendation to limit the spread of mobile home parks.

Proposed zoning for mobile homes on North McDowell Boulevard brought the most heated discussion as the council routinely sifted through the much-discussed environmental design plan to update the 1962 general plan. It also sets a growth limit of 500 new living units per year.

The planning commission had recommended against additional mobile home parks on North McDowell Boulevard, saying it would discourage the development of industry in the area. Three mobile home parks already exist on the street.

Councilman Richard W. Clecak argued unsuccessfully that services such as schools, recreation, police and fire could not support the residential zoning. The proposed zoning could bring as many as 500 new mobile homes. "Let's face it, we're already in trouble in regards to services," Clecak said.

Councilman Robert E. Daly said a portion of the property is landlocked and would not be suitable for industrial development.

Supporting the residential zoning were Daly, Robert A. Brunner, John W. Cavanagh Jr. and William A. Perry Jr. Joining Clecak in opposing it were Mayor Helen Putnam and Fred V. Mattei.

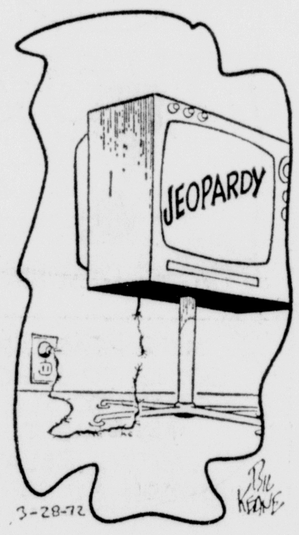

Left in the plan was the proposed greenbelt around East Petaluma to lend open space, recreation and a sense of unity to the area. Former City Councilman John J. King derided the plan, saying money spent in buying and developing the greenbelt would be better spent on a large eastside park.

The only other major change in the plan came in proposed zoning for the north side of East Washington Street between Payran and Ellis streets. While planning consultants and the planning commission had recommended professional-office zoning, the council supported the requests of property owners for neighborhood commercial zoning.

The council said it recognized that some traffic problems may be created by the commercial zoning, but said they could be dealt with when development plans are submitted.

The council adjourned until 4 p.m. today when it will consider the chamber of commerce recommendation to remove all parking meters from downtown streets.

Firemen In Novato Urge Appeal Panel

Novato firemen are circulating an initiative petition for an election to establish a personnel board to hear grievances and appeals of firemen.

The Novato Professional Firemen's Association asked the district board during recent negotiations to enact an ordinance setting up a board. Directors rejected the idea and firemen decided to try to put the issue to voters.

If firemen get 10 per cent of the district's 12,601 voters to sign the petition, an election will be held, according to Lt. Raymond Dougherty. "We're shooting for the November election," he said.

As proposed the personnel board would have five members — two members appointed by district directors, two by "the recognized employee organization" and the fifth by the other four members.

The ordinance would cover all employees except the chief and volunteer and emergency employees.

Drive-In Movies

TRENTON, N. J. (UPI)—The State Senate passed a bill Monday that would require drive-in theatres to expel all automobiles from their premises an hour after the end of the movie.

Development Airing Due

The Fairfax Planning Commission will review preliminary plans for a two-acre housing development on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, submitted by the Gentry Development Co., at its regular meeting, at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Though density of the development is still being discussed, it is expected that approximately 10 to 15 units will be constructed on the property.

Plans for redrawing the boundaries of a portion of an adjoining 68-unit development by the Gentry Company will also be considered. The remapping has been made at the request of the commission in an attempt to save some of the area's trees.

The commission will rule on an application from Rose Todorovich to operate an occult store and parlor at 1607 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

The meeting will be held in the fire department social hall, which is located upstairs in the rear of the fire station.

Maddox May Run For Senate

ATLANTA (UPI)—Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox says he is inclined to run for the U.S. Senate and will make known his final decision by April 10.

Maddox is currently running a straw poll consisting of clip-out advertisements placed in a number of daily newspapers in the state to test voter sentiment for his candidacy.

Governor's Welfare Program Applauded

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Pointing to a savings total of $388 million, the state Department of Social Welfare says a recently completed study shows that Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare reform program "has worked as expected."

In a 138-page report released Monday, the department's budget and controls branch said the savings have been realized since Reagan first announced his welfare reform proposals in March, 1971.

The study was the same one cited in published reports earlier this month that called it a secret report showing that the governor's highly touted welfare reforms were not working as expected.

At the time of the newspaper reports, Welfare Director Robert B. Carleson said the study was not "secret" and called it "incomplete."

In a news conference Monday, Carleson said results of the study were "encouraging" but he emphasized the report was "basically working material" for his department to evaluate the effect of the Reagan reforms.

Carleson said the study was being made public partly to counter the newspaper reports.

The study credited the reforms made by Reagan through administrative changes with most of the welfare caseload decrease. It gave partial credit to the 1971 Welfare Reform Act, which went into effect last October.

"The welfare caseload between March 1971 and January 1972 had declined by 182,600 persons," the survey said. "This represents 538,000 fewer persons on welfare than the department had estimated last year prior to reform."

The department admitted that the study was only a "quick look" because of financial and time limitations.

Forget About Diamond Glitter; Concentrate On The Spade Suit

If we could bid perfectly, most hands would be easy to play. In real life we find ourselves in an inferior contract a fair part of the time. When this happens, we must not be overcome by the tragedy; we must do our best in the play of the cards to make our bidding look reasonable.

IN REAL MESS

West opens the jack of hearts, East puts up the king and you win with the ace of hearts. You now perceive that six diamonds would be a safer contract than six spades. It's too late to worry about that; worry about how to make six spades.

Can you plan to ruff your low hearts in dummy?

Look ahead and see what will happen. Suppose you ruff a low heart in dummy at the second trick. You get back with a club to the king and ruff another low heart. This leaves you with one heart still in your hand. When the opponents take the ace of diamonds they can also collect a heart trick to defeat the contract.

TACKLE LONG SUIT

The best plan is to tackle dummy's long diamond suit. At the second trick you lead a diamond to force out the ace.

East should return a club, hoping to knock out dummy's ace, but you foil this plot by winning with the king of clubs.

Now you draw all of the missing trumps and lead a club to dummy's ace. Dummy's good diamonds then furnish all of the tricks needed for the slam.

AS A BARRIER

You never actually ruff a heart in dummy, but you couldn't make the slam unless dummy had the power to ruff hearts. Dummy's trumps act as a barrier, even though you shouldn't use them.

When dummy has a very powerful long suit, it usually pays to develop that suit rather than go after ruffing tricks. Consider both possibilities before you make your plan for the hand.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner deals and bids one diamond. The next player passes and it is up to you, holding:

♠ - 7 3 2
♥ - K 8 6 3
♦ - A 8 4
♣ - 6 5 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one heart.

The suit isn't much good, but the bid may help partner choose the best contract for the combined hands.

San Marin Wins Healdsburg Baseball Tourney

The way to win a baseball game, at least if you're a Marin County team, is not to pitch a no-hitter.

Gene Frey of Redwood High School pitched one yesterday in a tournament in Fresno, but was touched for two hits in extra innings and lost the game. Meanwhile, San Marin's Ken Siler scattered three hits to give the Mustangs a tournament victory in Healdsburg.

San Marin defeated Healdsburg, 3-1, while Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park captured third place in the same tournament by defeating Sonoma, 5-3, and Piner of Santa Rosa, 12-2.

Terra Linda defeated Drake in the Santa Rosa tournament, 5-3, and then toppled once-beaten Alameda, 8-2, for seven straight victories. Drake went on to bombard De Anza of Richmond, 18-0, as Al Curtiss went and hit his second homer of the day and went five-for-five, driving in seven runs.

In the same tournament, Petaluma bombarded Cloverdale, 17-1, but then was eliminated after a 9-5 loss to Vallejo despite a two-run homer by Tom Camby.

Redwood, playing in the Fresno tournament, lost to Fresno, 13-3, before Frey molded his gem in an eight-inning, 2-0 loss to Hoover of Fresno.

San Rafael lost to Mission of San Francisco, 3-2, in the San Francisco tournament, while Tamalpais lost to Oceana of Pacifica in the Terra Nova tournament in Pacifica, 5-4.

San Marin's Marty Larsen figured in all three runs as the Mustangs won at Healdsburg for the second consecutive year. He scored on Hoza Wright's single in the first, tripled home Ed LaRocque in the second and scored on Dave Ilchert's sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Larsen and Rich Villa of San Marin made all-tournament team, along with Rick Butler, Bob Murray, Marshall Brant and Lou Goring of Rancho Cotate. Goring was the tournament's most valuable player.

Goring drove in three runs and Brant two in the triumph over Sonoma. Brant drove in three with a fifth-inning homer in the nightcap, while Butler knocked in three more and Goring two.

Drake made six errors against Terra Linda as the Trojans scored only one earned. However, Terra Linda pounded out 11 hits to swamp Alameda behind the four-hit pitching of Mike Sabel. John Loberg hit three doubles and drove in three runs in that game.

Drake's game with De Anza was called after five innings because of a time limit, or perhaps out of mercy. In one day, Curtiss managed to raise his batting average 136 points to .303.

Redwood's Frey struck out seven and walked just two through the regulation seven innings, allowing only three baserunners. In the eighth, he yielded a scratch infield single, was victimized by two errors, then gave up a clean hit. The

SPORT NOTES

Howarth's Bat Accounts For Hits

By RALPH CHATOIAN

HONOLULU — James Eugene Howarth is a 25-year-old accountant who wants to make the big leagues . . . with his bat, not an adding machine.

Howarth is a rookie outfielder — first baseman who has the sports writers here talking about his chances of sticking with the San Francisco Giants for the upcoming season. A bright young man who earned his accounting degree at Mississippi State College in between his four seasons of minor league baseball, Howarth hit safely eight times his first 14 at bats, including a home run, triple and single in the first two games of the series against the Lotte Orions of Tokyo.

Jim is very pleased with his fast start which he says, for him, is unusual.

"I'm usually a slow starter in spring training," he said, and added that he felt he didn't really start hitting the ball really good until the series against the Orions. "In my first five hits, one was a bunt single and the other four were chinkers. I really didn't get good wood on the ball."

Of his homer and triple, he said, "That felt much better. You know when you really get into a ball and I did on that homer. But the triple was off the end of the bat."

Howarth is coming off a fantastic year at Phoenix in the Pacific Coast League in which he hit .363. He was called up by the Giants at the tail-end of last season and had three hits in 13 at bats. This spring he is getting a long, hard look from manager Charlie Fox and his coaching staff.

A plus in his favor is that he plays both first base and outfield, giving a better shot as one of the S.F. extras.

"I played first base as a freshman at Mississippi State and then played outfield the rest of the time there" said Howarth before the team left Hawaii for Phoenix. "So I feel comfortable at either position. You have to react more at first base, but since I have played there before there's no problem." It's definitely an asset to my chances of making the ball club."

Another young Giant who is gaining in confidence every day of spring training is Dave Kingman who is trying to become the big league's biggest third baseman ever. The six-foot-six Kingman is giving Al Gallagher quite a battle for starting position.

When Giants' outfielder Ken Henderson got plunked with a pitch in the first inning of Saturday's second game, it looked from the pressbox that the Giants were really in trouble. The ball bouncing off his left knee really made a pop. Fortunately, it was just a bruise and the next morning Ken was walking through the lobby of the Iliaki without a trace of a limp.

Henderson really believes in bat practice, and not just from the batting cage. For at least 15 minutes, and sometimes a half an hour before each game, Ken plays pepper with anyone who will field the balls and toss them back. Standing about 20 or 25 feet from the fielder, Ken will just tap the ball back, over and over and over.

"I think it helps me keep my eye on the ball," said Henderson. "Willie Davis of the Dodgers has been doing this for years, but I just started doing it for the last couple of years. I try to play a little pepper, at least 15 minutes, every day. I'm a firm believer in it. At least, I think it helps me."

Before going out to the mound to pitch Saturday night's game, Sam McDowell, when asked, told me he was going to concentrate on his bread and butter pitch, the fast ball. And did he ever. Man, that ball really moves! Out of the 80 pitches he threw in his five-inning stint, 49 were strikes and most were the blazer.

Many of the nearly 300 Northern California Giants Boosters here for the series were shaking their heads in disbelief as Sudden kept throwing the ball past the Orions. I'm sure glad he's on the Giants' side.

A's McLain Beaten By Cleveland, 3-2

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Oakland A's owner Charles Finley can be concerned with the pitching of his new acquisition, Denny McClain, as well as with Vida Blue, his ace hurler of last year.

Finley saw McClain, formerly of the Texas Ranger, give up eight hits, walk four and strike out two batters in seven innings Monday as the A's fell to Cleveland, 3-2.

Eddie Leon's single in the seventh cracked a 2-2 tie and gave the Indians the victory. The win went to Dick Tidrow who hurled seven innings.

In Oakland, holdout Blue met Monday with his attorney, Robert Gerst. It was their first face-to-face meeting since Blue announced he was considering leaving the A's for a job in private industry.

Finley said he knew nothing about reports that two private companies have offered to chip in $25,000—the difference between Finley's offer to the left-hander and Blue's reported new demand of $75,000 a year.

Warriors, Bucks Vie

Nate Vs. Jabbar Tonight

By DAVE BEGEL

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—There have been some bad raps thrown at the Milwaukee Bucks this year.

Some people say the Bucks aren't going to repeat as National Basketball Association champions. These people say the Bucks depend too much on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and that the team is weaker this year while other teams are stronger.

Bucks Coach Larry Costello denies his team is weaker. He does, however, admit the other teams in the league are stronger. And he sees another dogfight coming up on the even of the NBA playoffs.

Back in January, the night before the Bucks ended the Los Angeles Lakers 33-game winning streak, Costello put it in a nutshell.

"We're the world champs," Costello replvtbt "Everybody is chasing us. We're the best and we will still be the best until someone else wins the title."

The chase for the Bucks' title gets under way tonight and the Bucks —not surprisingly —will be around to fend off all challengers.

Whether they will be successful is open to question. They are not the shoo-in they were last year.

The chase opens at the Milwaukee Arena the same way it did last year, with the Golden State Warriors the opening round opponents for the Bucks.

Last year the Bucks took the series 4 games to 1 to earn the right to meet the Los Angeles Lakers.

This year the Warriors and Bucks have split in four meetings, and the Warriors have a better ball club than they did last year.

The big battle will be at center where Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will go against Nate Thurmond. Abdul-Jabbar has said Thurmond plays him tougher than any other center in the National Basketball Association. Thurmond averaged 21 points a game this season and 16.2 rebounds. Abudl-Jabbar hit 34.9 points a game and 16.7 rebounds.

One forward should be a standoff with Cazzie Russell facing Bob Dandridge. But Russell doesn't play the greatest defense and the edge on that part of the game goes to Dandridge.

At the other forward Clyde Lee will have Milwaukee's Curtis Perry. Neither player gets a lot of points and Perry's main job will be to keep Lee away from the boards. Perry also has had trouble this year with fouls and will have to be careful.

Jeff Mullins will probably play Oscar Robertson at one guard. Mullins, who moves well on offense, averaged 21.8 to robertson's 17.4. But against each other, Robertson has averaged 29 points a game while Mullins has hit for 22.7. Robertson's strength should also take some of Mullins' offense away.

The other guard will be Lucius Allen against either Fritz Williams or Jim Barnett. Allen has come along fast in the last half of the season and with his quickness should rate an edge over whoever he faces.

The Bucks are hurting a little on the bench with guard Jon McGlocklin out at least for the first two games with a back strain. Wally Jones, the fourth guard, has been nursing a pulled hamstring. If needed Dandridge will switch to guard and John Block or Toby Kimball will move in at forward.

The Warriors' big bench man, especially against the Bucks, is thin man Joe Ellis. Ellis averaged 15 points a game against Milwaukee this year and his deadly outside shooting has bothered Milwaukee in the past.

The edge for the opening round has to go to Milwaukee, what with the home court advantage and all. But the Warriors have been tough for the Bucks this season and could surprise, especially if they win one of the first two games Tuesday and Thursday night.

Baseball All-Star List Picked

NEW YORK (UPI)—Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced today that the names of 128 players have been put in nomination for the 1972 Major League All-Star game.

The starters for the All-Star game, which will be played in Atlanta on July 25, will be elected by the fans for the third straight year.

Eight players have been nominated for each infield posititn and catcher and 24 for the three outfield positions in each league. As in the past, pitchers and reserves will be named by the managers of the All-Star squads.

The nominees were named by a special 144-man panel comprised of baseball writers, broadcasters, players, field managers and general managers.

A computerized ballot carries the names of the nominees in alphabetical order under each position as in the past two years. A voting fan has to punch out boxes on the ballot corresponding to the players of his choice.

The ballot also contains a write-in area for those fans who wish to vote for a player not listed among the nominees. Fans using this section punch out an indicated box which automatically causes the computer to eject the ballot for hand tabulation.

All 24 major league teams have representation on the ballot, which will be available free in all major and minor league ball parks and in retail stores which sell Gillette razors and

BRAVES CUT NOVATO'S DILLON

Novato's Russ Dillon received traveling papers yesterday from the Atlanta Braves.

The Braves' hard throwing left-hander had hoped to crack the team's mound staff but was optioned to Richmond. At this Triple A level, the 1969 Novato High School graduate will attempt to work his way back onto the Braves varsity.

Cut along with Dillon were veterans Bob Didier, an erstwhile starting catcher, and Tony LaRussa, a former Oakland A reserve second baseman.

AFTER 42 YEARS

Kentucky Retires Rupp

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI)—Adolph Rupp, after winning more victories than any other basketball coach in history, was forced against his will to seek new triumphs in the game of politics.

The University of Kentucky Athletic Board voted unanimously Monday night that the mandatory retirement age of 70 would apply to Rupp, and thus ended the 42-year reign of the "Baron of Basketball."

Rupp said recently that if he were forced to leave coaching he would enter the Democratic primary in the state's 6th District, whose Democratic congressman is retiring. The Athletic Board moved up its meeting three days to allow him to beat the filing deadline.

Though Rupp was reported to have been told in advance of the board's decision, he appeared to take the news hard. He was informed in Tuscaloosa, Ala., after a lecture. He declined to discuss the future.

"Let's not talk about it. Let's talk about something pleasant," he said. "I want to sit quietly and think about it."

Only the university trustees can overturn the athletic board's decision and they are expected to let it ride.

In those 42 years, Rupp achieved:

—The all-time record of 879 wins;

—A lifetime winning percentage of 82 per cent (879-190);

—Four National Collegiate Athletic Association titles and one National Invitational Tournament championship:

—A record 20 appearances in the NCAA tournament;

—A record 27 Southeastern Conference titles;

—Five Sugar Bowl Tournament crowns;

—And 19 championships of his own University of Kentucky Invitational.

Rupp's assistant, Joe B. Hall, is considered the front runner for the job, but the athletic board made no commitments Monday night. It appointed a five-member committee to search for a successor.

"No commitments have been given to anyone at anytime about the head coaching job," said Kentucky President Dr. Otis Singletary.

"I would like to continue coaching," Rupp said recently, "but I've had it in my mind to run for Congress for a long time."

Rupp also possesses a masters in business from Columbia and has made a fortune in business investments, including a large cattle farm.

Rupp brought his Kansas twang and fast-paced game to the Bluegrass in 1930. Although a hard-driving perfectionist with an often caustic tongue, Rupp attracted numerous All-America and All-Conference players to Kentucky.

A vocal critic, Rupp helped prod the Southeastern Conference into improving its basketball program. He conducted overseas clinics and produced Olympic Gold Medal winners.

Rupp received expert tutoring while playing guard at the University of Kansas—with Dr. Forrest C. (Phog) Allen as his coach and James B. Naismith.

$20 MILLION-PLUS

Kapp Suit Vs. NFL

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Blacklisted quarterback Joe Kapp filed a multimillion dollar damage suit Monday against the National Football League, calling it "a monopoly" that has conspired to violate anti-trust laws.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court, named all 26 NFL teams and NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle as defendants. It asked for damages from each club "in an amount to be determined," and then trebled.

Kapp's lawyer, Moses Laksy, said he was seeking an unspecified amount, but reports put it at between $20 million and $30 million.

"We knew it was coming, but we didn't know when it would land," said NFL counsel Marshall Leahy. "It can be assumed we'll make a full and complete defense."

Kapp, an ex-Minnesota Viking, was to have played for New England last season but was replaced at quarterback by rookie of the year Jim Plunkett when he could not agree on contract terms with the Patriots.

The suit charged that Kapp has been barred from playing pro football in the U.S. since refusing to sign with New England before the 1971 season.

The quarterback charged the defendants with causing cancellation of his $600,000 contract with the Patriots from 1970 through 1973. It alleged he received only $154,166.51 and the Patriots refused to pay him the rest.

"In ... unlawful conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust laws of the United States," the suit said, "defendants caused defendant New England Patriots to breach and they did breach the contract, and the defendants have boycotted Joe Kapp and have refused to allow him to play any further professional football in the United States."

Far from being the sport, the suit said, pro football under the NFL is "a monopoly ... a gigantic commercial enterprise organized and operated in interstate commerce for the profit of defendant owners."

Kapp contended the defendants were engaged in the following illegal activites: the draft, option, the standard player contract and a boycott or blacklist.

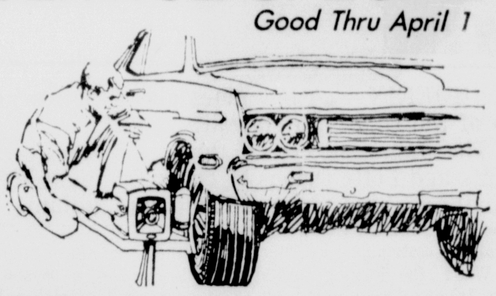

Kapp, 39, was a University of California at Berkeley graduate in 1959. Though drafted by the Washington Redskins, he chose to play in Canada until picked up by Minnesota in 1967.

The signal-caller played for the Vikings from 1967 to 1969 and led them to the Super Bowl in his final season.

In 1970, Kapp refused to sign with Minnesota and was picked up by New England after the start of the season.

York's Anchor Catch Recalled

By AL GIDDINGS

Do you remember the story about Ray York of Novato recovering an anchor with a line and a life preserver attached? Well, since then I've had 22 calls from guys who have lost anchors, and who think Ray must have their anchor.

Evidently, Ray has an unlisted phone so they contact me. Each caller has his own story on how the anchor was lost. One fellow named Lisle Senser of San Rafael sent me a letter with diagrams and maps, plus drawings of anchors, ropes, chains, the whole works. In his case, he says: "I think another fisherman hooked my floating anchor line, pulled up the chain end, removed the chain, then tied on a life preserver for a marker, thinking a sunken boat was on the other end." I can't contact Ray York either, so I guess he has gone into hiding. If I were him, I'd stay in hiding! (The bottom of San Pablo Bay must be loaded with lost anchors.)

I HEARD Hank Schramm of the party boat fleet on the radio Sunday saying that salmon fishing was great. He added that about 30 fish were in the box, and that the day was beautiful. I was out by Point Reyes at the time, and it seemed that just then the wind came up, causing white caps all through the ocean areas. If you are a salmon fisherman, get out there early to beat the winds. Those northwest winds will be blowing from now till July; so it's early morning fishing for best results.

I received a report of the Garcia Golden Gate Sport Fishers salmon derby winners for the week of March 13th to 19th. The biggest fish recorded for that week was a 27 pounder caught by Robert Dayton of Fremont. The prize was a 508 Garcia-Mitchell reel and a Garcia Conolon Rod. The tenth prize fish weighed 11 pounds caught by John Sundseth of Foster City. His prize was a box full of Garcia lures.

CHARLIE PIERCE of San Rafael seemed to be the most successful striper fisherman that I know of this week. Even on a windy-rainy day, he and some friends took limits trolling down by the Paradise Park Pier. They fished there, trolling spoons because it was the only calm spot in the bay. It takes perseverance.

I ATTENDED a meeting at Point Reyes where the loose dog problem was discussed by local ranchers, Point Reyes Seashore personnel, conservationists and other interested parties. Some interesting facts! There are perhaps 160,000 dogs throughout the county. 94,000 are registered. Some 34,000 are picked up each year by the Humane Society's dog contol men. Nine men make up their roster with five men in the field each day. It looks to me that they have an impossible task.

Jim Wright of the San Rafael police range announced that there will be a registration class for a Hunter-Safety class to begin on April 1 at 9 a.m. Registration will be at the range.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA Hunters were reminded today by the Department of Fish and Game that the wild pig season in Monterey closed yesterday.

Monterey County is the only area in the state in which there is a closed season for taking European wild pigs. The season opened in that county on Sept. 25 of last year.

Assists Crown To West

NEW YORK (UPI)—The two biggest reasons for the Los Angeles Lakers' record busting success during the 1971-72 National Basketball Association regular season were Wilt Chamberlain and Jerry West.

That fact was confirmed again today with the release of final statistics which showed Chamberlain, the Lakers' captain, and West, their All-Star guard, won three of the five major statistical championships.

Chamberlain had 23 rebounds in his final game Sunday against Seattle to finish with a league-leading 1,572 for a 19.2 average. It was his 10th rebounding title.

The 35-year-old Chamberlain also led in field goal percentage, fanning 496 shots out of 764 attempts for a .649 percentage.

The 13-year veteran also reached the 30,000 point milestone on Feb. 16 and passed Bill Russell, the previous all-time leader, in career rebounds. Wilt now has 22,298.

West, a former scoring champion, finished seventh in scoring this year but won his first assist title with a total of 747 in 77 games for a 9.7 average. West just nipped Seattle player-coach Lennie Wilkens who finished with 766 assists in 80 games for -9.6 average.

Coach Deems Wlodarczyk Prep Quarterback Prize

By PAUL DWORIN

Football fans had better get used to seeing the name Steve Wlodarczyk (Wo-dar-zik) if Rancho Cotate High School's grid coach Claude Brock judges talent as well as he coaches his team.

"Steve is the best high school quarterback I've ever coached, and I've coached some good ones. In San Francisco I had Mike Holmgren(who went on to play at University of Southern California) and at relative stages in their careers, Steve is a much better quarterback than Mike was," said Brock about his prize athlete.

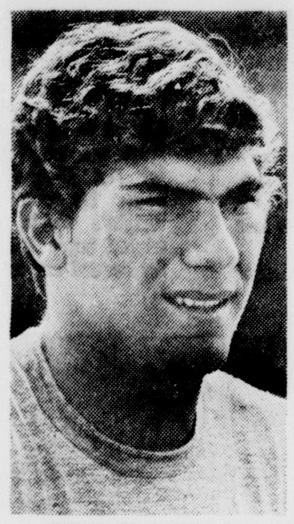

SUBJECT

The subject of this accolade is a personable young man who will graduate from Rancho Cotati in Rohnert Park in June and is presently one of the most highly sought after prep football players in the country. Wlodarczyk is being actively recruited by, among others, University of Notre Dame, University of Tulsa, University of Washington and Arizona State University.

At this time Wlodarczyk isn't sure which school he'll enroll in (he has until April 19 to make that decision); but no matter which one he chooses, his statistics indicate that the other schools will miss out on a lot of talent.

VARSITY CAREER

In his three year varsity career, Wlodarczyk gained 4,258 yards passing with an amazing 58 percent completion rate and accounted for 42 touchdowns. During his senior year, Wlodarczyk did even better, completing 65 per cent with only seven intercepted passes which is "phenomenal for a school that throws as much as we did," according to Brock. Over his last four games, Wlodarczyk didn't throw one interception.

STEVE WLODARCZYK
Standout quarterback

At 6-feet-2 and 195 pounds, Wlodarczyk is smaller than the current crop of good, young quarterbacks such as Jim Plunkett, Dan Pastorini and Archie Manning, but as Wlodarczyk is quick to point out, "I'm the same size as Darryl Lamonica and am bigger than John Brodie or John Unitas." And we all know about Brodie and Unitas, so Wlodarczyk's height shouldn't be a question mark — besides, he's only 17 and has a few more years growth ahead of him.

He has also had one extra intangible quality that could carry him on to the pros: his love for the game. "I'd love to play pro football, but whether I make it or not, I intend on staying in football some way or another, I'd probably become a high school coach," said Wlodarczyk about his future.

OTHER ARENAS

Wlodarczyk's abilities show in arenas besides the gridiron. He is a highly regarded basketball player and was named to the All-Sonoma County League first-team two years in a row. Weber State College is trying, unsuccessfully, to lure him away from football and has offered him a basketball scholarship. Wlodarczyk also plays golf for Rancho Cotate and carries a three or four handicap.

School has not gotten in the way of his athletic pursuits, based on his 3.1 grade point average. He is ranked in the top 20 per cent of his class. You'll be hearing about Steve Wlodarczyk, wherever he is.

Lakers To Host Chicago Tonight

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

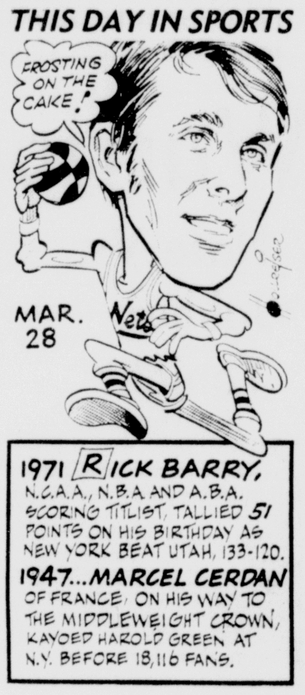

The Los Angeles Lakers are looking to trade on the eve of their National Basketball Association playoff opener.

The Lakers set eight NBA records enroute to the Pacific Division title but Coach Bill Sharman isn't satisfied. "As pleased as I am about the records, I would trade them all for the NBA championship," said Sharman after his club registered a record 69th victory in its regular season finale Sunday.

Los Angeles dominated the NBA season, setting records for most victories (69), highest winning percentage (.841), longest unbeaten streak (33 games) and largest margin of victory (63 points) among others. Now the Lakers begin the long playoff grind toward the title, facing the Chicago Bulls, runnersup in the Midwest Division, at home tonight.

The Los Angeles-Chicago game matches one of the league's top offenses in the Lakers against the No. 1 defense in the Bulls. Sharman called Chicago, "a rugged, physical and very aggressive team. We must rebound well against Chicago if we hope to win. They have strong rebounders in Chet Walker and Bob Love."

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

Those who release the ball too far behind the line will often — if they throw the hook — miss to the left. This is because the ball has too much time to work on the way down the lanes. Set up your approach so that your left foot finishes comfortably close to the line, and you can get the ball four to six inches out onto the boards.

Chicago Releases Horlen

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The saddest time of all during baseball's spring training time of optimism and hope is when a prematurely old former star gets the word that it's time to hit the road.

That bad word came to Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox Monday when they gave their 19-game winner of 1967 his unconditional release. The action means that Horlen can dicker with other clubs and make a deal for himself.

Horlen, 8-9 last season with a 4.27 earned run average, can catch on. But the chances are slim.

"I talked with 18 of the 23 other major league clubs attempting to make a deal for Horlen," said Roland Hemond, player-personnel director of the White Sox. "I'm hoping that by releasing Joe some of the teams that were not willing to buy him or trade for him will pick him up as a free agent."

In other camps: Joe Coleman pitched seven shutout innings as the Detroit Tigers beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 1-0, with the help of suicide squeeze bunt by Eddie Brinkman ... Jim Wynn's two-run homer in the third inning and rookie right-hander Scipio Spinks and James Rodney Richard combined to shut out the Cincinnati Reds on four singles in leading the Houston Astros to a 4-0 victory.

Ron Stone's pinch ninth-inning homer broke up a tie game and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins ... Mike Kekich and Rob Gardner pitched a four-hitter as the New York Yankees beat the Atlanta Braves, 1-0.

Dave Cash's fourth single of the game drove in Frank Taveras with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Kansas City Royals, 8-7, in a game spiced by 27 hits and six homers.

Marin was strafed for 26 runs and 25 hits in losing to Diablo Valley, 14-2, and Contra Costa of San Pablo, 12-0. The Tars will be idle until resuming Camino Norte Conference play next Tuesday at De Anza College in Cupertino.

Sonoma State College was pounded for 12 hits and lost to the University of San Francisco, 9-1, in the San Francisco State College Invitational baseball tournament yesterday.

Sonoma was scheduled to meet S.F. Sate in further tournament play today.

Altman 'Satisfied' In Japanese League

PHOENIX — A few notes about the weekend trip of the Giants to Hawaii:

The Japanese consul threw a party for the Giants and Lotte Orions of Tokyo the night before their three-game series at Honolulu Stadium.

One of the invited guests was Hawaii's Lieutenant Governor. Hal Wood, the former United Press International sports editor who now writes a column for the Honolulu Advertiser, introduced the lieutenant governor to a sports writer traveling with the Giants. The sports writer acknowledged the introduction but not diplomatically.

"I've been wanting to meet the trainer of the Orions," said the sports writer. "How do you do that acupuncture stuff?"

Willie Mays and Willie McCovey missed the party so big George Altman, Juan Marichal and Sam McDowell received the attention of Honolulu feature writers. Giant fans already know all about Marichal and McDowell but here is what Altman, just turned 39, had to say about his life with the Orions since winding up his major league career with the Chicago Cubs in 1967:

"I DIDN'T know what to expect when I went to Japan but I'm more than satisfied now. The first year or two I was nostalgic. I thought maybe I should have stayed stateside. But I feel I made the right decision.

"It took a while to adjust to the difference in the two styles of baseball. The ball used in Japan is different. So are the parks, the interpretation of the strike zone and we even had to carry our own bats and buy them.

"There are good players in Japan but the big difference is depth. We might have two top pitchers and infielders but the rest would be comparable to Triple A or Double A ball.

"JAPANESE BASEBALL is progressing and it will continue to move forward in competition as long as teams like the Orions continue to make trips to the states.

"This trip has been a big boost to us psychologically. The Orions have gained confidence by being able to win over here."

ALTMAN is the big bat man of the Orions. In his four years with them he has averaged over 30 homers a season and last year hit 38. This year the Orions shifted him from the outfield to first base and gave him an additional duty — teaching rookies the proper way to bat.

And, because he now speaks pretty good Japanese, Altman is an interpreter for Frank Johnson, the ex-Giant who joined the Orions this year. When Johnson missed a signal the other day, Keiji Osawa, the manager, asked Altman to explain things to Johnson.

"Frank will know enough Japanese by the end of this season to get all the shouted signals on his own," said Altman. "He's a fast learner."

Buffalo Fires McCarthy

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Buffalo Braves coach John McCarthy was given his walking papers yesterday and the dismissal immediately touched off wide speculation over his successor.

In a joint statement, Braves owner Paul Snyder and general manager Eddie Donovan said the club has elected not to extend McCarthy's one-year contract and that his "responsibilities as head coach of the Buffalo Braves have terminated."

McCarthy took over the coaching duties when Snyder abruptly fired Dolph Schayes one day after the Seattle SuperSonics humiliated Buffalo, 123-90, in the opening game of the season.

Under McCarthy, the Braves came up with just 22 wins against 59 defeats and the overall record of 22-60 matched their first year of competition last season.

Investment Opportunities Firm Headquarters In San Rafael

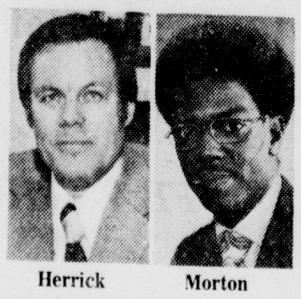

A corporation that specializes in investment opportunities for physicians and dentists has opened its Northern California headquarters in San Rafael.

Farrar, Herrick and Associates of San Bernardino opened at 1330 Lincoln Avenue, suite 302. The San Rafael office is headed by Edward H. Margolin of Novato.

The company develops and manges investment opportunities such as hospitals, apartments and child care centers. It has built 23 hospitals including Novato Convalescent Hospital, 38 office and medical buildings, 12 schools and colleges, 94 churches, plus shopping centers and other commercial buildings.

Company president is Dr. Del Herrick, who practiced dentistry in Southern California for several years and presents seminars to medical-dental meetings, professional associations, and the University of California extension lecture series.

Herrick, who was in town to open the San Rafael office, said his company not only develops and builds but stays around to manage the development to make sure the investor is protected. "Being in the medical profession myself, I have to be able to look my colleagues in the eye," Herrick said.

Herrick Morton

AN ITALIAN food delicatessen and catering service called Lucchesi Gourmet will open in about a month in Novato Fair Shopping Center at 920 Diablo Avenue.

Owner will be Adolph J. Lucchesi of Novato, who has operated the Italian Village Gourmet in San Francisco's North Beach for the past 11 years.

The new delicatessen will move into the space now occupied by Novato Fair Coffee Shop. "We hope to bring the Italian Village Gourmet type of service to Novato," Lucchesi said.

WILLIAM H. MORTON has been promoted to assistant manager of Crocker Bank's Mill Valley office.

Morton joined Crocker Bank in 1971 after serving three years as an assistant branch manager with City National Bank of Detroit. He lives with his wife and family in San Francisco.

PAUL'S AUTO BODY shop, which has been operating for 15 years at 50 Woodland Avenue, San Rafael, will change hands at the end of this month. Owner Paul Krolak will sell to John Hughes of San Rafael, who has been employed with Jack Hunt on Fourth Street.

MARTIN M. CORBETT of Fairfax, former executive in the broadcast industry, has taken over Marin Landscape Materials Co. in Novato at Highway 101 and Atherton Avenue. He bought the firm from James Hazen, who retired after 11 years.

Manager of Corbett's new firm is William Koenig, who has been with Marin Landscape Materials for eight years. Corbett said he will seek business throughout Marin and Southern Sonoma as well as Novato.

Beginning April 9, the company will be open on Sundays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Business hours for the other six days are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

ALFRED G. SCHENONE of Novato, assistant manager in the Greenbrae office of the California State Automobile Association, will take over as manager of the Eureka office on April 17. Schenone joined CSAA in 1963 and has been assistant manager in the San Rafael district for four years.

Donald S. Holland, sales manager in Sacramento, will succeed Schenone as assistant manager in the San Rfael district.

JEROME KHAN of Greenbrae has been named commercial-industrial specialist for the National Real Estate Exchange, San Francisco.

Khan has been an active, licensed real estate broker for the past 11 years, specializing in the commercial income investment field throughout Northern California and the western states.

THOMAS E. SOLINSKY of Belvedere has been named loan officer in Wells Fargo Bank's 464 California Street office in San Francisco. Solinsky joined Wells Fargo in 1966 and was loan officer in the bank's Market-Montgomery office.

A USED CAR firm has opened up at 625 Grand Avenue in San Rafael at the intersection of Francisco Boulevard.

The new firm is Francisco Auto Sales, owned by John Yank of Petaluma, who was with Leon C. Felton for four years as used car manager and salesman. Yank has 18 years experience in the used car business.

He took over the lot formerly occupied by Credit Motors, which moved to 1000 Francisco Boulevard. Yank will be assisted by David Mariani of Novato.

MARIN RADIATOR at 290 Jacoby Street, San Rafael, will change hands at the end of this month.

William Duff, owner since 1949, sold the business to Daniel Bailard and Kenneth Vernon, both of San Rafael. Vernon has been an employee there for six years. Bailard worked for PG&E for eight years and owned a service station in Sonoma County before that.

New owners of Marin Radiator will continue the same services under the same name. The company installs radiators and air conditioning for autos, trucks, motor homes and recreation vehicles.

Duff said he plans to go to work for an air conditioning distributor in Mountain View.

Credit Card Use In Rental Of Apartment

You can rent an apartment with a credit card under a new BankAmericard plan unveiled in Santa Rosa.

The program, first of its kind in California, will allow tenants of the Gaslight Apartments to use BankAmericard for monthly rent payments.

Young America Homes is the developer and owner of the new 138 unit apartment complex at 3637 Sonoma Avenue.

Under the new program, tenants need only fill out an authorization form and their rent will automatically be charged to their BankAmericard account each month.

INVESTING

Bonds: Tax Exempt vs. Taxable

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Would it be wise for a working widow with around $35,000 for investment to tie up some or all of this in municipal bonds? — D.V.

A. The important factor in deciding this issue is not how much you have to invest but what tax bracket you are in. At tha present time, considering the current interest rates on both municipals and AAA corporates, unless you are in a 28 per cent or higher brakcet you can do as well in taxable bonds. As your tax level moves up, the advantages of investing in tax exempts increases.

For example: $1,000 invested in a 5.2 per cent tax exempt will return $52 free of tax. However, on a $1,000 taxable bond returning 7.2 per cent, the going rate, you will clear $52.50 if you are in the 28 per cent bracket, $50.75 in the 30 per cent bracket but only $43.50 in a 40 per cent bracket. With these figures in mind you can judge for yourself whether municipals are suitable investments for you.

Q. My shares of American Airline (NYSE) were purchased several years prior to the 1967 split. As you know it never did recover. Why did they stop paying dividends? I am 77 and don't particularly need the cash, but I can get 6 per cent in the credit union. Should I cash in? — A.M.

A. Directors voted to omit the dividend in July because operations for the first half had produced a deficit equal to $1.14 a share. Increased traffic levels over the final half resulted in a small per-share profit for the full year. Strongly improved results, looked for in the current year, were evident in the 20 per cent gain in revenues reported for January.

Shares are currently trading within a point or two of the all-time high of 49, reached in 1967. Lower operating costs coupled with higher revenues from Trans Caribbean Airways acquired in 1971 should also boost 1972 profits. I see no justification for selling at this time.

Rise In Income

BEVERLY HILLS (BW) — Speed-O-Print Business Machines Corp. has reported net income in 1971 rose 56 per cent on a 7 per cent gain in sales.

Real Estate Sales Boom Seen In '72

Marin County real estate sales are living up to predictions for a boom year, with both total sales and prices on the rise.

The Marin County Board of Realtors reported that for the month of February, multiple listing sales were completed on 181 properties at a total price of $7,051,406. In February 1971, sales were completed on 127 properties worth $4,545,780.

During the first two months of this year, 328 properties on multiple listing sold for $13,034,991. During the first two months of last year, 232 properties sold for $8,354,750.

Daniel F. Deedy, executive manager of the board of realtors, reported that the average price of Marin homes sold through multiple listing rose by 29 per cent during the five-year period from 1967 through 1971.

The county average price of a single-family home in 1967 was $31,915. This went up to $41,180 in 1971.

Belvedere and Tiburon showed the highest increase in the price of homes during those five years — 48 per cent. Sausalito had the smallest price increase — 10 per cent.

Here are the average prices of homes in the various cities and unincorporated communities as of 1971, and the percentage increase as compared wth 1967:

Belvedere — average home $90,310 (48 per cent increase over 1967); Corte Madera — $38,135 (31 per cent increase); Fairfax — $30,760 (31 per cent increase); Greenbrae — $53,610 (25 per cent increase); Kentfield — $60,370 (28 per cent increase); Larkspur — $45,325 (44 per cent increase); Mill Valley — $40,565 (31 per cent increase); Novato — $36,210 (24 per cent increase); Ross — $68,195 (24 per cent increase); San Anselmo — $33,275 (22 per cent increase); San Rafael $40,320 (25 per cent increase); Sausalito — $52,230 (10 per cent increase); Tiburon $62,475 (48 per cent increase).

Share Loss Told

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Calprop Corp., housing developer and syndicator, reported a loss for the last six months of 1971 of $101,228, or 15 cents per share, before a nonrecurring fire loss.

Market In Move Higher

NEW YORK (UPI) —Investors turned to selective buying during the first two hours today as the stock market moved slightly higher. Trading was moderately active.

Of the 1,575 issues crossing the tape, 641 advanced and 534 declined. The two-hour turnover totaled more than 6,260,000 shares. Advancing volume held a 3-to-2 margin over declines. Analysts said the selective buying actually began late in Monday's session and carried over into this one. Many traders and investors, however, seemed to be cautious.

On the American Stock Exchange, prices were lightly higher in moderate trading.

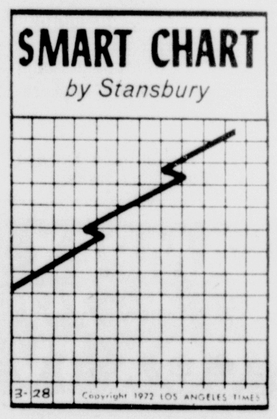

Bar At Indian Valley Golf Club Will Be Sold

The Indian Valley Golf Club bar and restaurant at Stafford Lake in Novato will be sold to new owners about the first of April.

Albert L. Leach of Novato, who has operated the bar and restaurant since he retired from the Air Force in 1959, said he is selling out to Darrel D. Altermatt of Ignacio and a group of others —including golf pro Jeff McAndrew — which holds controlling interest in the golf club. Altermatt operates an equipment company in San Rafael.

The sale price for the liquor license and restaurant was reported to be $40,000.

Service at the bar and the restaurant will continue unchanged under new manager Robert E. Richards of Novato.

"Now that Ace Clifford has carpeting on the floor, he wants it on his walls, too."

HENRY H. MULLER of Kentfield Hardware will call it quits after 26 years in the same location. Here, he inspects gopher trap, one of many items on the shelves for his close-out sale.

Kentfield Hardware To Close In Month

Kentfield Hardware Store, at 870 College Avenue, will vanish from the scene after 26 years of faithful service to the community.

Proprietor Henry H. Muller, 64, who first opened the store in 1946 and hasn't missed a day of work since, will close shop at the end of April when his stocks are sold out.

"I'll take a vacation for a month or two and then hope to work partially," said Muller, who will be 65 in May. He has no idea as yet on what he will be doing. He and his wife Harriet will continue living in Kentfield.

During the close-out sale, his store will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. six days a week and from 10 a.m. to 3 pm. on Sundays.

When Muller first opened his hardware store immediately following World War II there was no commercial area at Kentfield Corners. He ran a one-man shop with only part-time help, never letting illness keep him away from the job.

AFTER THE COUP

Throw A Stone Into Bangkok – Splash But Not Many Ripples

By HENRY S. HAYWARD
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BANGKOK, Thailand — No visible signs of tension greet a newcomer to this capital city three months after the military coup which put at least a temporary halt to Thailand's brief experiment in civilian government.

Newspaper headlines emphasize the government's military operation against Communist insurgents far to the north. The impression given is that the military has this upsurge of activity firmly under control — even though this time it seems to be of somewhat more serious proportions than the regular yearly outburst of insurgency.

Bangkok and Chiany Mai also had the pleasant diversion of a visit by the British royal family. This put the popular Thai king and queen on display as well.

Every taxi driver offers the usual complaint about Bangkok's traffic, which indeed bunches into horrendous jams almost daily, especially when royal visitors must be conveyed around the city without delay.

A fuss is going on here about long and short haircuts. A local football official said football players of 25 countries attending the 14th Asian youth football tournament here in April would be asked to come with short hair or not at all.

Said a local football player of the campaign to trim male locks: "I'd quit before I'd cut my hair."

It also was being noised about that Bangkok's famed floating markets had virtually disappeared. So many tour boats now are thronging the suburban klongs, it seems, that the waterways are jammed and the small market boats are giving up. Produce instead is moving to and from market by truck.

Public reaction to the Nov. 7 coup meanwhile was either apathetic or favorable — favorable in the sense that most Thais wanted Bangkok's burgeoning crime wave cleaned up and municipal reforms set in motion.

Under the leadership of former Prime Minister Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, the governing National Executive Council (NEC) quickly got such reforms under way.

A crackdown on nightclubs, massage parlors, and other alleged hangouts for hooligans was instituted, with bars and shops selling liquor ordered to close at 1 a.m.

A ban on the sale and serving of alcoholic beverages before 11 a.m. and between 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon also has been laid down. Formerly there were no restrictions.

So on the surface Bangkok seems more orderly and straitlaced.

Yet beneath the surface calm, some informants find the normally quiescent Thai students more restive than usual. They feel the students might become a spearhead for demonstrations against prolonged continuance of martial law, which the military junta reimposed after the coup, unless more progress toward a return to civilian government becomes evident.

QUIET — The Royal Grand Palace in Bangkok is symbolic of how little tension greets the visitor there these days. There is a fuss about long-haired athletes and the students are somewhat restive. But mainly the city is quiet.

The coup itself was genuinely gentle. No arrests or executions for political purposes have followed the military takeover. The partly elected, partly apointed legislature was abolished by decree, but civilian courts were permitted to continue, although under military law. This means summary justice can be invoked when the government so decides, and no appeals.

The Thai press meanwhile is not censored but is known to be subject to scrutiny after the fact. It is "free to write, as long as it doesn't write what the government doesn't like," according to a Bangkok source. One political cartoonist is said to have been called in recently for a chat about some of his cartoons.

In a session with the press on Feb. 4, Gen. Prapas Charusathiara, deputy chairman of the National Executive Council, also took newsmen to task several times for not taking notes about explanations he had provided in the past — and not writing them up or printing them.

One of the stranger developments here is that Thailand at present has no foreign minister — and no ranking foreign policy expert in the ruling council.

Former Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman, along with all other civilian cabinet ministers, found himself out of a job after the coup and has become a Buddhist monk. On Feb. 3, he entered Wat Bovornives and took the name of Bhikkhu Thiramautho.

Clad in a saffron robe and with shaven head, he chatted with Britain's Prince Philip during the latter's visit to the Wat. Thanat is believed to have joined the monkhood only for one month, partly because he had no other employment in sight, partly at the request of his elderly mother.

Although the National Executive Council has considered recognition of Bangladesh (without taking definite action) and has contributed to the support fund for Cambodia, other big foreign policy issues — including the possibility of establishing relations with Communist China — have been largely kept in silence.

Five To Plead On Variety Of Dope Charges

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

SAN FRANCISCO — Five persons, four of them Marin County residents, will offer pleas April 7 in U.S. District on a variety of narcotics charges.

Facing indictments before Judge Samuel Conti are Kenneth Michael Stevens and Carl Sheldon Wolfe, both of Mill Valley; Peter Erlebron and Barbara Lynn Coffman, both of Bolinas; and William Paul Wyler, of Baltimore.

All have been charged with possession of hashish; Wyler and Wolfe face an additional charge of distributing hashish; and Coffman with possession of peyote.

They were arrested February 15 with one pound of hashish in their possession, according to narcotics agents, who said an additional 32 pounds were found when agents returned to their house in Bolinas with a search warrant.

All but Wyler have been released on bail.

Flood Control Zone Fight Due Before Supervisors

Dissatisfied residents in the San Rafael Meadows Flood Control Zone will carry their fight to dissolve the zone across Highway 101 to the Marin County Board of Supervisors next week.

Disapproval of the zone and its effort to end flooding in the community of 250 homes boiled over Thursday with a petition, poll and vote of the 59 residents present at a meeting of the zone's advisory board, according to Charles E. Murphy, county flood control engineer.

Murphy said the advisory board received a petition bearing 156 signatures in favor of killing the zone and found similar discontent in a poll of the community. Of the respondents 32 favored ending the zone and 22 wanted to keep it, he said.

A vote of the audience split down he middle, he said.

The board refused to endorse the dissolution move, but sent the petition and the polls to the county. Murphy said the issue will go to the supervisors next Tuesday.

If the petitioners own more than 25 per cent of the property in the zone, the supervisors will be forced to put dissolution to a vote or abolish the zone, Murphy said.

In other action the board recommended a 1972-73 budget of $7,400 leaving the tax rate at 29.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation although Murphy had recommended a budget of $25,000 with a $1 tax rate to accumulate reserves for flood control work.

Murphy said the community poll found two persons in favor of the $1 tax rate and 37 against, but 32 were willing to keep the existing rate. Another 22 opposed.

Total flood control protection in the community, which is plagued by rain runoff, is estimated to cost $875,000 and Murphy reported on the cost to each homeowner of paying for the work with a bond issue.

The zone's share of the expense, $700,000, would mean the owner of a $30,000 house would pay $1,950 over a 15-year period, he said.

A partial solution that would cost the zone $400,000 would cost the same homeowner $1,100 over the same period, he said.

"It got a lot of laughs", Murphy said. The community poll included only five in favor of a bond issue compared to 48 against, he said.

Hospital Board Meets Tonight

The Marin Hospital District board will hear a report from its fire protection committee and begin drafting a job description for the new position of director of in-patient mental health service at its regular meeting today.

The board meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the coral room of Marin General Hospital following dinner at 6 p.m.
